Silvermaster Asserts Currie and Patterson Prevented His Ouster

Naval Intelligence Move Blocked by White House Aide, He Tells Senators

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, accused of heading a Soviet espionage ring here, swore yesterday that a White House aide and a member of the "little" Cabinet saved his confidential wartime Government job after naval intelligence tried to have him ousted.

The White House aide who intervened on his behalf, he said, was Lauchlin Currie, confidential assistant to the late President Roosevelt. Silvermaster said he had known Currie for some years.

Currie, he said, went to Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson, who in turn wrote a letter clearing him to Milo Perkins, then head of the Bureau of Economic Warfare, where Silvermaster was working.

Chairman Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.) said Patterson's letter was dated July 3, 1942, when the former War Secretary was Undersecretary of War. He pointed out that there was no indication Patterson knew of the thick Civil Service file on Silvermaster when he wrote the recommendation.

Currie has been invited to testify, Mundt said.

Mundt Says File Missing

Mundt also announced yesterday:

1. The file concerning the employment of Silvermaster at the Bureau of Economic Warfare is not in the National Archives, where all files of BEW employes are supposed to have been sent. Investigators were instructed to find out who was responsible for the disappearance of the file.

2. Watson B. Miller of the Immigration Service has now promised the committee to locate J. V. Peters, mysterious foreign-born head of the Soviet underground in this country, who is known under many aliases, including Alexander Stephens, Isadore Boorstein, etc.

3. Alger Hiss, former policy-making State Department official, will testify today at his own request to deny charges by Whittaker Chambers, Time magazine editor, that he was a member of the Communist Party underground among Government workers.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall said at his press conference yesterday he knew of no rea-

Sullivan to Ask Truman If He Can Release Remington Data

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Navy Secretary Sullivan said yesterday he would ask President Truman if information in secret Navy files on William W. Remington could be revealed to a Senate Investigation Subcommittee.

Previously he and three rear admirals had refused to answer the committee's questions about the cause of Remington's removal as a reserve officer. The subcommittee is investigating the efficiency of loyalty checks in Government service.

Later Lawrence V. Meloy, executive secretary of the Loyalty Review Board of the Civil Service Commission, told the committee that since last October 38 Federal employes had been fired as disloyal.

Many Others Quit

Another 98, he said, had resigned after they had been certified to their regional boards and 438 had quit while under investigation by the FBI. He explained that some of the 438 no doubt had left for other reasons.

Meloy was unable to say how many of these 574 former employes were members of the Communist Party or of Communist-front organizations.

Sullivan's promise to do what he could to pry information from the Navy's intelligence file on Remington came after committee members had hammered at him and the three admirals for more than an hour without cracking their refusal to talk about this information. All four said they were bound by a presidential directive of last March 13 not to reveal anything which would disclose their sources of information or jeopardize national security.

Admirals Questioned

The officers were Rear Admirals Thomas B. Inglis, chief of naval intelligence, Charles C. Hartman, assistant chief of personnel, and George L. Russell, judge advocate general.

Remington, who was commissioned in the Naval Reserve in November, 1944, was honorably discharged April 16, 1947, after he had been requested to resign. He held a series of important posts in Government agencies from 1942 until last June 28 when he was placed on leave of absence from the Commerce Department after being named as one of several Federal officials who were in communication with Russian agents.

Inglis and Hartman explained to the committee that the language of a Navy letter advising Remington that if he submitted his resignation "promptly" he would be permitted to resign honorably was "just routine." Inglis then admitted under questioning that his branch of the Navy had a secret file on the former officer but positively refused to talk about it.

"I'm very sorry," he said, "but I am under instructions to answer no questions pertaining to the loyalty or the loyalty investigation of any Navy personnel."

Inglis said he had been given these instructions orally at 1 p. m. yesterday by Admiral Russell, who had got them from Sullivan. Pressed by Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) to say whether he interpreted these instructions to silence him if discharge of an officer involved disloyalty or communism, Inglis hedged.

"I asked Admiral Russell," he explained, "if it was possible to give my name, rank and position in the Navy." "Those," said Ferguson wryly, "are well known to the committee."

Inglis did concede that the secret intelligence file on Remington

Excess Rain Threatens Area Crops, Roads

Highway Damage In Montgomery Hits $200,000

Persistent rains threaten millions of dollars worth of damage to Maryland and Virginia crops, mainly tomatoes and tobacco, agricultural authorities reported last night.

However, authorities noted that rain is benefiting late hay and dairy pastures in both States, and corn crops in Virginia. Maryland corn, however, has already experienced too much rain.

In the Greater Washington area, reports of damage in the wake of Tuesday's storm and yesterday's continued rain indicated Montgomery County was one of the hardest hit areas. Damage to county bridges and roads was estimated at $200,000.

A bumper-to-bumper traffic snarl on Rhode Island ave., reaching from the District line to Hyattsville, during the rush hour last night plagued motorists as a result of detours from flooded sections of Bladensburg rd.

Prince Georges County police said the jam resulted from detouring traffic to Rhode Island ave. from Bladensburg rd. at 38th ave., Eastern ave. and the overhead bridge in Hyattsville. Water was still as high as 18 inches at the Bladensburg Peace Cross.

Rain Forms Lake

A rain-formed lake in an excavation pit overflowed, blocking the rear entrance to the Prince Georges County court house in Marlboro.

Virginia highway engineers kept an anxious eye on roads and bridges, particularly in the Louisa-Fredericksburg area, as heavy rainfalls yesterday swelled rivers above normal levels and many streams out of their banks.

Damage to Maryland crops, mainly tomatoes on the Eastern Shore, may reach between three and four million dollars, Dr. Howard L. Stier, chief of the Maryland department of markets, University of Maryland agriculture extension service, reported.

Wet weather since Saturday has been swelling tomatoes with excess moisture and cracking them open to ravages of mold. Dampness also may pave the way for Statewide infection of crops by late blight, Dr. Stier said.

He estimated that 25 per cent of the Eastern Shore tomato crop may have been injured.

Also threatened in Maryland, he said, are cantaloupes, just ripening in the southern area of the Eastern Shore; cucumbers, wheat and hay still in the fields, and fruit.

He said he feared that continued rain may double crop loss figures. Weather forecasts for the area

American Lowers Hurdles Mark in Olympic Games

London, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Sweeping down the red cinder track with flawless form that belied his terrific speed, 22-year-old Bill Porter of Northwestern University won the 110-meter high hurdles today in the new Olympic record time of 13.9 seconds.

His two American teammates made it a clean sweep with Clyde Scott of the University of Arkansas second and Craig Dixon of U.C.L.A., third.

Thus, for the second time in two days a capacity crowd of 82,000 at Wembley Stadium cheered the Stars and Stripes flying from all three mastheads at the ceremonial podium. The United States swept all three places in the shot put yesterday.

Big Bill Smith, burly Hawaiian swimmer, gave the United States its second gold medal of the day by winning the men's 400-meter free style in 4 minutes, 41 seconds, eclipsing an Olympic record of 4:44.5 set in the preliminaries by 17-year-old Jimmy McLane of Akron, Ohio. McLane was second to Smith in the final.

Asks Public Hearing

Ewing Calls Studebaker's Charge of Anti-Red Gag Untrue

Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing yesterday demanded a public hearing on charges he had hindered the exposure of communism in schools. The charge was made against him by John W. Studebaker, former commissioner of education.

In a letter addressed to Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee, Ewing termed Studebaker's accusation "a vicious attack."

Ewing said he had been on vacation in Maine when he received a letter from Studebaker Tuesday which contained the charges.

Ewing, who arrived in Washington by plane late yesterday, went on to say in his letter to Ferguson:

"I returned to Washington in the hope that your committee, which I understand is to investigate this matter for the Senate, will promptly grant me a public hearing.

"I request a public hearing in order that all the press and the American public can know the real facts rather than the untruths and deliberately misleading statements contained in Studebaker's letter."

Studebaker had complained that Ewing's office banned a speech he planned to make urging teachers to expose communism in their classes.

As a result of Studebaker's charges, Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), and Senator James O. Eastland (D., Miss.), Tuesday demanded Ewing's resignation.

Soviet Crisis Talk Avoided By Marshall

Grave Secretary Fends Off Every Query by Press With 'No Comment'

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Secretary Marshall, one of the very few men in the world who know where we stand now with the Russians, was unable to discuss that situation during his news conference yesterday.

To every question, directly or indirectly touching upon the meetings in Moscow, he had to reply "no comment."

He said that for very evident reasons the State Department could make no statement. And the large group of correspondents, who assembled in the theater-like conference room at the State Department, did not attempt to press him. So nothing was said on the matter.

The Secretary was very grave, however.

Marshall Is Serious

His manner reflected none of that cheerfulness and high good humor that was reported to have been shining in the faces of the three Western diplomats who recently saw Premier Stalin. If anything, Mr. Marshall appeared to be more serious—in fact, preoccupied—than he has been on other occasions when the Russian situation was under discussion with correspondents.

The apparent absence of optimism on the part of the Secretary is pretty generally evident throughout Washington.

Neither in diplomatic nor military circles has there been any marked change of sentiment, or attitude about the outlook, since the meeting betwen Stalin and the American, British and French representatives. The shadings of opinion have not changed.

That is, some officials believe war can and will be avoided, others that it can but that the odds are somewhat weighted against avoidance, and still others who feel it is inevitable.

This May Be Danger Period

Where there is a considerable degree of agreement is on this point:

That we may, now, be passing through the period of greatest danger. The whole issue of peace or war may be in the balance.

This conclusion is based on the view that Russia sooner or later would be forced, by time and events, to make a sharp and definite decision. The decision would be whether, in terms of Communist objectives, the present policies

Hearing Due Next Month

House Group Probing Dealings In New Automobiles Here

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A Congressional subcommittee has been quietly conducting a spot check of sales practices of new-car dealers in the District for the past three weeks, it was disclosed yesterday.

An investigator of the House Subcommittee to Investigate Questionable Trade Practices has inquired into the sales policies of 30 to 40 dealers here as a result of receipt of 50 to 75 letters complaining of various unfair practices. Used car dealers are not being checked, a committee official said. The prober is preparing his report for submission to the subcommittee headed by Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) The committee counsel, John T. M. Reddan, disclosed that in addition, 20 dealers have been asked to reply to a comprehensive questionnaire on their new-car sales practices.

Reddan said the letters from District residents were supplemented by verbal complaints from Congressmen charging that some dealers were insisting on the purchase of a "lot of gadgets" on new cars, trade-ins and even "cash kickbacks."

He said the committee would attempt to sift out the facts in the complaints and probably would hold a hearing in a month on the car-sale practices. Washington was selected as a test city because the committee felt it was "typical" of the country and because the investigation could be conducted economically, Reddan said.

Reddan said the committee "probably would also look into the alleged purchase of new cars as taxicabs and resale of the vehicles as private conveyances."

The head of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, Earle O. Baker, expressed surprise that the survey had been made, but said he would not comment until the subcommittee report is made public.

The subcommittee will hold a public hearing Tuesday in the new House Office Building on the gray market in steel in the Chicago area. Representative Macy said he felt that mispractices in the handling of steel probably were at the root of the alleged black market practices in auto sales.

2 Greek Units Join to Split Rebel Forces

Mt. Grammos Seen Cut Off in Action; Clearance Ordered On Foreign Cables

Athens, Aug. 4 (AP).—Two Greek columns, advancing from east and west, joined today and cut in two the "Free Greece" of Communist guerilla chieftain Markos Vafiades.

The junction was made in the neighborhood of Kerassovon and was made possible by the storming of Kleptis Height by two battalions moving in from the south.

Samarina, a former staging point for guerilla bands moving into central and eastern Greece, was captured in the operation.

Previously a general staff spokesman had said a meeting of the two columns would cut off Mount Grammos, the rebel stronghold near the Albanian border, from the Smolikas mountain area to the south, and split the guerilla forces.

It was considered unlikely that any large number of rebels was caught in the southern pocket. A military source said he understood the guerillas had withdrawn to the north to establish a new defense line, only two miles from the Albanian frontier.

Premier Themistokles Sophoulis intervened today against the military government of Athens which has been delaying Associated Press cables. The Premier instructed the military governor to allow all foreign press cables to clear without interference and as quickly as possible.

Government Loss On Potatoes Now 4 Million a Week

By The Associated Press

The Government lost $170,169,000 on potatoes during the 1943-47 crop years, the Senate Banking Committee was informed yesterday.

The committee also heard that the Government is now losing money on potatoes at the rate of four million dollars a week as the new crop moves onto the market.

The information came out during a discussion with Secretary of Agriculture Brannan, who appeared before the committee in support of President Truman's anti-inflation recommendations. Senator Williams (R., Del.), who was sitting with the group, brought up the potato question during the hearing.

The Agriculture Department is required by law to support potatoes at 90 per cent of parity, along with a number of other agricultural commodities.

The Agricultural Act of 1948 passed at the last session of Congress requires that the 90 per cent support level be continued until the entire 1948 crop has been marketed. Thereafter the support price will range from 60 to 90 per cent of parity.

Congress Gets Warning

Hog Prices Reach New High; Brannan Asks Positive Action

While live hog prices were setting a new all-time high at Chicago yesterday, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan told Congress meat prices will go higher through the summer "unless some positive action is taken."

Hog price at Chicago hit $31.50 a hundred pounds, 40 cents above the previous high mark reached Monday. Continued scarce supplies from country feeders accounted largely for the upturn.

Brannan told the Senate Banking Committee meat supplies will continue tight and added:

"We can expect little relief from the price pressures now current until the closing months of 1949."

The committee is studying the anti-inflation program recommended by President Truman. Republican leaders have said Congress will not provide the President with the rationing and price control authority he asked last November and again at the extra session.

Brannan insisted an analysis of the current situation indicates immediate measures should be taken to bring "meat prices under control and to make meat available to all our people."

"We are handicapped by the fact that the necessary authority to do this was not granted last November, or even last January," he said.

Brannan said meat consumption is likely to average somewhat lower next year than in this, perhaps about 140 pounds per person, compared with the estimated current rate of 145 pounds.

The Secretary said the principal reduction will be in beef. Pork supplies, he said, should be somewhat larger and all meat prices are likely to "average higher next year than this year."

Brannan said average per capita food consumption in the Nation will run about the same in 1949 as in 1948. This is about 12 per cent above that of the pre-war years, 1935-39.

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department said Thanksgiving turkeys will cost more than ever this year. The holiday birds retailed at about 60 cents a pound last November here in Washington.

The department also said there is no prospect of lower chicken and egg prices before next year.

U. S. Agrees On Rural Aid For China

Commission Set Up To Push Reforms Under Marshall Plan

The United States and China agreed last night to set up a five-man joint commission to carry out rural reconstruction in China under the Marshall foreign aid plan.

The agreement was set forth in an exchange of notes between American Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart and the Chinese Foreign Minister, Dr. Wang Shih-chieh at Nanking.

Rural reconstruction is one of "several projects" to be set up in China with Marshall Plan aid. Total of 60 million dollars has been earmarked tentatively for such projects which include reconstruction of power facilities and mines.

The 60 million dollars would be drawn from the 400 million dollars earmarked for China during the first year of the Marshall Plan. China also will receive 125 million dollars in military aid.

Three Chinese and two Americans will be appointed to the commission. They will recommend and supervise the spending of funds for projects including agricultural production, marketing, credit, irrigation, home industries, nutrition, sanitation and farm education.

The agreement specifies that rural aid need not be distributed on a geographical basis. It has been assumed that none would go to areas controlled by, or likely to come under the control of, the Chinese Communists.

Charles Stillman, chief of the United States group of Government engineers and economists serving in China, is in Washington now writing a preliminary report. He plans to fly back to China Sunday to gather information for his final report to ECA Director Paul G. Hoffman.

Lens Strikers To Discuss Settlement

Univis Workers Agree On Governor Herbert's Terms as Peace Basis

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 4 (AP).—Striking workers of the Univis lens plant, thwarted by National Guard troops, agreed late today to Gov. Thomas J. Herbert's terms for approaching a settlement of the 92-day-old dispute.

Herbert Hirschberg, regional organizer of the CIO United Electrical Workers, announced members of the Univis plant local would vest in their leaders full authority to sign an agreement with the company.

Governor Herbert, incensed by members' rejection of a signed agreement between union and company officials last Sunday, had refused to arrange another conference unless UEW negotiators were empowered to act for the membership.

Strike Settlement

"The Governor has been informed," Hirschberg announced, "that we will be prepared today to meet to settle the strike on the basis of the membership giving authority to the negotiating committee in conjunction with the shop committee."

Earlier in the day the Governor turned a cold shoulder to a union request that he arrange further negotiations subject to ratification by the UEW local's membership.

"I have no intention," he said, "of putting myself in a position to be double-crossed twice."

The company, reporting that 390 of its normal 658 production workers were back on the job in the second day of operations under protection of guardsmen, announced it would proceed immediately to replace the strikers.

No New Overtures

M. H. Stanley, company president, said he intended to make no new overtures to the CIO United Electrical Workers whose strike, he estimated, has cost Univis one million dollars in sales and its employes $500,000 in lost wages.

Stanley said:

"The overwhelming majority of our employes want nothing to do with the CIO union, and that of necessity must be the position of the company."

Offstage Discord

Chorus of Wage Demands Forces Met to Cancel Season

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—The world-renowned Metropolitan Opera today canceled its 1948-49 season because, it said, demands for union wage increases could not be met.

If the cancellation stands, it will be the first time in 50 years that the Met has failed to present a season of opera.

The opera association said its decision was caused by "failure to reach agreements with all of the 12 unions representing the employes."

Shortly after the announcement, Local 802 of the AFL American Federation of Musicians said it had reluctantly withdrawn demands for a wage boost in an effort to reach a settlement with the opera. This union said the only point it had continued to insist on was establishment of unemployment insurance and old-age benefits.

The musicians said in a statement the Met "is not a private venture."

The union said it was "confident that this unilateral action will not stand for long, that those to whom the Metropolitan represents an integral part of our culture will assert themselves and make possible the next season."

However, a spokesman for the association indicated the decision was final.

The Met has suspended operations only twice, they said, since it opened in 1883.

GOP Surrenders To South to Speed Action on Housing, Inflation, U. N. Loan

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate late yesterday voted 69 to 16 to abandon the filibustered anti-poll-tax bill, removing the first of four major hurdles in the race to adjournment.

The Senate vote came on a simple motion to adjourn overnight after a full dress conference of Republican Senators formally surrendered to the South.

This wiped the slate clean for quick House-Senate passage of the three major measures Congress expects to pass—limited anti-inflation and housing bills and a 65-million-dollar United Nations building loan.

Price Bill Substitute Approved

With leadership compasses set for adjournment by next Tuesday at latest, and possibly even this Saturday night, there were these other rapid developments:

1. The House Banking Committee by a vote of 16 to 8 approved a GOP substitute for the Truman price control program. The bill, slated for House passage today, restores wartime controls on installment buying, authorizes an increase in required deposits by member banks in the Federal Reserve System, and an increase in gold reserve requirements.

2. A Senate Banking Subcommittee tentatively approved a non-public housing bill largely within the framework of the short-range measure passed last session by the House. The new measure, however, places chief stress on loan guarantees for low-cost homes and rental projects. One new provision creates a new division in the Housing and Home Finance Agency to work for standardization of building codes and measurements.

3. Former Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), who rarely ever signs a "discharge" petition, added his name to the more than 170 House members demanding a House vote on the Senate-passed Taft-Wagner-Ellender long-range housing bill, carrying public housing and slum clearance features. A majority of the House, or 218 signers, is required to force a vote.

Neither Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) nor Senate GOP Steering Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) set a fixed date for adjournment. Both said they are shooting for a Saturday get-away, but ad-

Signals Heard Again in Search For 52 on Plane

Dakar, French West Africa, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Officers aboard the French frigate Leverrier said today they had picked up two feeble radio signals believed to be from an Air France Latecoere 631 flying boat which disappeared in the South Atlantic Sunday with 52 persons aboard.

The first signal, of undetermined origin, was heard last night. The second, described as very weak, was picked up at 6 p. m. (2 p. m., EDT) today.

Eight American heavy bombers joined the stepped-up search for the giant seaplane.

Seven B-29 Superfortresses and one B-17 Flying Fortress took off from bases in the United States, Bermuda and Germany after last night's radio message sparked hope the plane may still be afloat.

Fate of Thousands in Hands of Carusi, Laborer for Humanity Since Age of 4

The fate of thousands of homeless Europeans lies in the hands of a determined Italian-American who failed to get the only job he ever asked for.

It is not to his discredit, however, that Ugo Carusi lost in his first joust with the business world, for he began laboring in the cause of humanity at the age of 4.

The balding, 46-year-old Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, though only 5 feet, 6 inches tall, feels he's big enough to handle his latest job.

In his present, post, he's hoping for additional money from Congress to get more than 40,000 displaced persons to this country during the next 11 months.

Collected for Hospital

In the job he held 42 years ago, he mingled with the Italian element in Barre, Vt., collecting dimes and quarters for a community hospital.

"I suppose that was the first interest I had in helping other people from other lands," say the mild, soft-spoken man who has served as assistant to five Attorneys General.

Carusi's mother and father came to this country when Ugo was yet in swaddling clothes. When his father died, the boy was 13 years old, the senior male in a family of six.

"I thought I'd better get going and help support the family," he recalled, "so I asked for a job at a grocery store—closing the door at Christmas time when customers would let cold air in."

Turned down flat, Carusi got a job as newsboy, one he held for three years until the influenza epidemic of 1918. Another Italian paper boy died while Ugo was ill, and Ugo lost all his clientele "because they thought I was the one who died."

Connected With Law

The State's attorney in Barre then offered Carusi an afternoon job as secretary. He soon became a court reporter—"a big murder case broke about that time"—and thus found himself intimately connected with the law.

"It was the last thing in the world I wanted to study, but somebody talked me into it," he once said.

UGO CARUSI

Not until after his assignment to the office of Attorney General Sargent in 1925 did Carusi actually study law. He married in 1928 and registered at National University.

Since then, he has served as assistant to Attorneys General Mitchell, Cummings, Murphy, Jackson and Biddle.

His concern for the welfare of immigrants has never wavered, and Carusi became officially associated with their affairs in 1940. Administration of immigration matters was switched that year from the Department of Labor to the Department of Justice.

"When I saw that those Italian families in Vermont could do in a single generation, I was convinced that America is the place for men with the will to work hard," he said.

The thousands from Italy and other European countries who feel the same way have placed their hope in him.

Carusi Says Funds to Limit Refugee Entry

By The Associated Press

A shortage of funds will limit to about 40,000 the number of refugees to enter the United States in the next 11 months, Ugo Carusi, newly appointed Displaced Persons Commissioner, said yesterday.

This is less than half the amount of immigration contemplated for the period under the displaced persons law passed in June. A total of 205,000 was set as the quota for the two years ending June 30, 1950.

Carusi said his conclusion is based on a study of what can be done with the "inadequate" two-million-dollar budget appropriated by Congress.

President Truman already has asked the extra session of Congress to grant this money. He also wants the law changed to eliminate what he calls discrimination against Catholic and Jewish refugees. He proposes, in addition, that the bill be broadened to admit a total of 405,000 persons during the next four years.

Carusi, a former Commissioner of Immigration, said that even if Congress grants the extra money, 60,000 to 75,000 displaced persons is all that the American Government can hope to bring in during the first year.

This is because the scarcity of funds has prevented the Administration from moving as quickly as it planned to hire personnel needed to start the immigration. A force of 300 to 400 "investigators and selectors" alone will be required overseas to screen the thousands of prospective immigrants, he disclosed.

Carusi said the flow of immigrants can be stepped up enough in the second year to overcome the slow start if Congress provides sufficient funds. If not, he said it will be necessary to reduce all present estimates.

The 47-year-old immigration expert said he strongly supports President Truman's view that the law be amended to permit admission of refugees who entered displaced persons camps after the present cutoff date of December 22, 1945.

"The present dateline has the effect of excluding virtually all the Jewish displaced persons," Carusi said, "since most of them entered in 1946 and 1947 after leaving Poland and other countries."

journment by Tuesday probably is more likely.

Senate GOP Conference Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (Colo.) summed up "consensus" Senate Republican thinking on the subject. He said an effort will be made to adjourn Saturday night "if it can be done in an orderly fashion." That means the Senate won't dive into an all-night Saturday session in order to quit. If stretch-out sessions prove necessary, Congress will wait until early next week to drop the curtain.

Martin Clears Decks

Martin cleared House decks for passage of two of the three GOP measures today—the just reported anti-inflation bill and the U. N. loan. Quick approval of both without change was apparently assured when the House by a vote of 216 to 122 yesterday adopted rules suspension procedure for the balance of the session. Suspension procedure permits passage of a bill without amendments after 40 minutes debate. A two-thirds majority is required for passage, however.

With these two limited versions of Mr. Truman's 11 points through the House, the adjournment ball will be passed to the Senate. The House cannot pass on the third point, short-range housing, until the Senate votes first.

Taft to Act Today

Senator Taft told newsmen he will make an effort to get the housing bill up and through the Senate today. Since the Senate Banking Committee will not act until this morning, immediate Senate consideration will require unanimous consent. Thus, a single objection will hold up Senate action on housing until Friday, and probably block any last slim chance of a Saturday adjournment.

Taft's goal, nontheless, is to push both the housing and anti-inflation bills through the Senate this week.

Prospects for enactment of a possible fourth point in the Truman program—a nondiscriminatory displaced persons bill—faded yesterday. House leaders said they are ready and willing to pass any Senate bill liberalizing date of eligibility restrictions in last session's D. P. act. Senator Chapman Revercomb (R., W. Va.), chief author of the present act, has never called a meeting of his Senate Judiciary Subcommittee to consider the changes.

Collapse of the Senate GOP drive to pass an anti-poll-tax bill actually came at yesterday's full conference of Republican Senators. The conference first rejected a plan to compromise with the Southerners by substituting a Constitutional amendment. Millikin said Republicans felt committed to the "legislative approach." Next it was decided to drop the anti-poll-tax bill altogether in the special session because it would take "weeks and weeks" to break the filibuster.

Plan Cloture Rule Change

That sounded like a victory for the Southerners, but a third decision was bad news to Dixie. The Republicans agreed, starting at the outset of next session, to amend the cloture rule to make it an effective instrument for shutting off debate. That, too, will run into a filibuster, but Republicans said they would have ample time to break what may be the last unlimited talkfest at the start of a new session.

As the current filibuster folded, Southern Senators didn't even have the last word. Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), started a defense of the constitutionality of the anti-poll-tax bill Tuesday night, resumed speaking at 1 p. m. yesterday, and finally concluded at 3:55 p. m.

Earlier, Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, accompanied by Senate Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), House Democratic Leader Rayburn and House Democratic Whip John W. McCormack (Mass.) conferred with the President on the legislative outlook.

Barkley said Mr. Truman seemed "anxious" about it and stood firmly behind his full program. The Kentuckian said he agreed "it would be bad for the country if they adjourn without substantially carrying out the President's program."

Rayburn Joins Drive

Across the Capitol Rayburn joined the drive to force a House vote on the TEW long-range housing bill, telling reporters: "There ought to be a bill passed this session—veterans and a lot of others need it."

Walter P. Reuther, chairman of the CIO National Housing Committee, in a statement hailed signature of the housing "discharge" petition by Rayburn and others as "a victory for aroused public opinion."

Terming the substitute Republican housing measure "a gravy train for the real estate lobby," Reuther urged "every American who is interested in decent housing at fair prices and rentals" to wire their legislators to sign the petition.

How They Voted on Filibuster

The following is the Senate vote which yesterday put aside the poll tax dispute:

(Technically, the vote was on whether to "adjourn" until today—which had the effect of dropping the poll tax issue—or "recess").

Body to Seek Jobs For Handicapped

President Truman yesterday called a meeting here for August 17 of his committee on "National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week."

The committee will make plans for this year's observance the first week in October.

The special week was established last year by Congress to high light the need for jobs for disabled veterans and other handicapped persons.

Segregation At Democratic GHQ Banned

By The Associated Press

The Democratic National Committee has banned race segregation in its headquarters staff in a new bid for Negro support in the presidential election.

Confirming the change, National Chairman J. Howard McGrath told a reporter the committee "merely is being consistent" by putting into effect a policy urged by President Truman for Government jobs and the armed forces.

McGrath said he expects to announce later the appointment of a Negro assistant to the chairman. He would not comment on reports that Representative William L. Dawson of Illinois is slated for this post.

McGrath said the committee is abolishing its Negro division as such and distributing its Negro workers among other units. He said there will be no race discrimination in the hiring of stenographers, clerks and other employes.

The Republican National Committee maintains a Negro division with Valores Washington, member of the Illinois Commerce Commission, as its head. William Murphy, GOP publicity director, said several Negroes are employed on the headquarters staff.

AFL Upholsterers Come Out for Truman

Philadelphia, Aug. 4 (AP).—The executive board of the AFL-Upholsterers' International Union, claiming 50,000 members in the United States, today announced support of President Truman and "all liberal candidates" on the Democratic ticket.

The board said in a statement it voted unanimously to back the President on grounds his reelection would be "the best safeguard for world peace" and would lead to repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The board said the Republican Party is "still split by traditional isolationism" and that election of a GOP President "would encourage the Russian rulers."

House Will Adopt Credit Curb Bill Today

A credit curb GOP substitute for President Truman's sweeping price control and rationing program last night was hurried through the House Banking Committee even as Senate leaders unveiled a Republican housing program.

The anti-inflation substitute, sidetracking nearly all of the Truman cost-of-living proposals, was approved by the House committee by a 16-to-8 party-line division and will be pushed through the House today.

The bill would restrict consumer and bank credit and increase gold reserve requirements of Federal Reserve Banks.

A Senate Banking Subcommittee headed by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) meanwhile disclosed details of the GOP's housing bill substitute. Unlike the Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill, stymied by the Republican House, it carried no public housing provisions. McCarthy said his subcommittee favored a slum clearance feature but may have to delete it to get the bill through the House.

Slated for full Senate Banking Committe action today, and possibly Senate consideration before nightfall, the substitute housing measure revives most of the provisions of the Wolcott bill passed last session by the House, with heavier emphasis on low-cost housing aids.

The House GOP anti-inflation measure, meanwhile, collided with a threat of veto. Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.), a ranking member of the House banking group, said Mr. Truman "will be compelled to veto it when he understands the devastating effects it will have on our economy."

The House "inflation control" bill provides:

1. That "in order to protect the Nation's monetary, banking and credit structure, and interstate and foreign commerce against increased inflationary pressure," the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System is authorized to exercise installment buying controls up to March 15, 1949.

These controls in wartime usually required a one-third down payment on such things as automobiles, stoves, house furnishings and electrical appliances. The remainder had to be paid in 15 months.

2. In order to "prevent injurious credit expansion," the Federal Reserve System until next March 31 may change reserve requirements of member banks as follows:

(a) Reserves against time deposits, up to 7 per cent. The top requirement now is 6 per cent.

(b) Reserves against demand deposits—in central reserve bank cities (New York and Chicago) the maximum requirement can be increased from the present 26 per cent to 29; in reserve city banks, from 20 per cent to 25; in country banks, 14 to 17 per cent.

3. Every Federal Reserve Bank shall maintain reserves in gold certificates of not less than 35 per cent against its deposits, and reserves in gold certificates of not less than 40 per cent against its Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation. The present requirement in each category is 25 per cent.

The idea behind increasing the reserves is that the higher they are the less money the banks will have to put out in inflationary loans.

Under a leadership agreement that the Senate would take the lead in preparing housing legislation while the House set the inflation-control program in motion, the Senate Banking Subcommittee cleared a bill providing chiefly credit and incentive aids to private builders.

The bill still must run the gantlet of the full Senate Banking Committee, and GOP leaders were reported having difficulty persuading Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) to go along with the decision to omit public housing.

As explained by McCarthy, the subcommittee-approved draft of the GOP housing bill:

1. Allows the Federal Housing Administration to insure loans up to 95 per cent on homes costing $6000 or less. The present limit is 90 per cent.

2. Permits homes costing $4500 to become eligible for loans under Title 1 of the present National Housing Act, the title applying to very inexpensive homes. The present limitation on costs is $3000. The new bill also increases by 35 million dollars the amount of money available for Title 1 homes. McCarthy said this provision would benefit some area of the South but would be of only "a little value" in the colder areas.

3. Makes 800 million dollars available for the so-called Title 6 rental housing loans. Large scale rental projects come under this title. The new bill establishes a limitation of $8100 per apartment. The present Housing Act has a limitation on rooms, instead of units, which McCarthy said was not working out satisfactorily.

4. Permits construction loans of up to 90 per cent on homes costing $7500 or less in projects of at least 25-family units. McCarthy said this may be reduced to 80 per cent.

5. Liberalizes loans to prefabricated home manufacturers. Manufacturers find, McCarthy said, that they "cannot get a loan under the present law."

6. Authorizes the Federal National Mortgage Association, a Reconstruction Finance Corporation subsidiary, to provide a secondary market for 50 per cent, instead of 25 per cent as now, of all loans made subequent to April 30, 1948. This applies to all guaranteed loans to veterans or FHA insured loans. A "secondary market" means that Government stands ready to buy up mortgages held by banks. This, it is believed, would induce the banks to be freer in lending for home building.

7. Establishes a division in the housing and home finance agency to work toward "a standardization of codes and measurements." McCarthy termed this the "most important section of the bill from a long-range standpoint." He said the division would have no power to enforce new codes or measurements, but would work with cities and industries toward standardization.

8. Guarantees a return of 2.75 per cent on equity investments in rental property. McCarthy said this provision was aimed principally at insurance companies.

'Suicide' Refers To Spy Inquiry

San Francisco, Aug. 4 (AP).—A seeming suicide note, with unexplained references to the Washington Communist spy inquiry, was found with a scattered pile of feminine clothing on Golden Gate Bridge today.

The note, dated August 3 and addressed "Dear E. T. B.," referred bitterly to E. T. B.'s "sensationalism," and declared, "The sun is setting and my life is going out with it." It was unsigned.

A motorist reported seeing a figure near the north tower of the bridge where the clothing and note were found.

State highway patrol officers noted that the initials of the addressee were the same as those of Elizabeth T. Bentley, key witness in the current congressional Communist expose in Washington.

The note also referred to "E. T. B." in the text as "Elizabeth."

Newspaper Clipping Found

With the scattered clothing were clippings from a San Francisco newspaper of yesterday carrying Miss Bentley's name, and that of Alger Hiss, former State Department official. Hiss' name was underlined in pencil.

The accompanying note was typed, and authorities described it as the work of a well-educated person. It bore no name, only the postscript: "Nobody would care about my name, except maybe Elizabeth."

The note, said in part:

"This little dump on the Pacific is not the best place to sit and contemplate the imponderables. It is drafty, and the janitor feels that June spells the beginning of summer and refuses to turn the heat on until the first of October, and the sun (if there is such a planet) is setting and my life is going out with it.

"You have done very well with it, haven't you, Elizabeth?

"I suppose you intend to go to Hollywood when you are quite through with them and they are quite through with you. That's fine. You and that colony should get along quite well together. You're two of a kind, sensationalism is part of your very fibre and your beliefs—your secret beliefs, even yet—run parallel.

"Leon spelled it out for us, Elizabeth. He warned us of the turnpoint and he defined the differences between what it was in the beginning and the 'now.'"

At this point the letter was torn. On a remaining piece of paper it continued:

"All right. Before you turn the next page of your diary, you will find the point of it quite gone. And so will I be.

"By the time some one reads this my troubles will be over, thank God. How I have suffered. I didn't want my little baby to suffer what I've been through so I'm taking it with me."

Note Doesn't Register With Miss Bentley

Elizabeth Bentley said here that "to the best of my knowledge I don't know anybody in San Francisco."

"I can't think of any woman with a baby out there that I know," she told a reporter.

Nor she said, does the name "Leon" register with her.

DISCUSSES TESTIMONY—Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan (right) discusses with William F. would "explain, add to or detract from" information in the personnel file turned over to the committee. He refused, though, to say whether his intelligence staff had made an investigation of Remington.

Sullivan was asked by William P. Rogers, chief counsel to the committee, if he didn't think supplying the committee with a file showing that Remington was discharged for nonactivity as a reserve officer and then withholding a file which showed something else "tends to mislead the committee?"

"I agree," Sullivan said.

The Navy Secretary was then asked by Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) if the facts in the case shouldn't be made public for the sake of Remington himself. There were other factors involved, Sullivan said.

"But," he added, "I can't name them."

Resume of Case

Meloy gave the committee a resume of Remington's case since he was fingerprinted and filed a personal history under terms of Mr. Truman's loyalty order last fall. Remington, Meloy said, was then with the Council of Economic Advisers as an economist but transferred to the Commerce Department last March 15.

Since it placed him under civil service, Meloy said, this appointment was conditional, just as if Remington had been hired for the first time. The FBI began an investigation in May, Meloy said, and on June 18 sent its report on Remington to the Investigations Division of the Civil Service Commission. The file was then sent to the Commerce Department, Meloy testified, and Remington was notified his last working day would be June 15 and he would be suspended beginning June 28.

Because Remington was not yet finally employed, Meloy explained, he was not charged but was sent an interrogatory which he was required to answer under oath in 10 days. Being at that time in Vermont, said Meloy, Remington asked and was granted an extension to August 6 for his reply to the interrogatory.

Ferguson then returned to the attack with a "hypothetical case." How was it, he asked, that a man "under FBI investigation in 1945 can hold four jobs and not be suspended until June 28, 1948?"

Meloy explained that during the war "thousands" of people were hired with no investigation because of the rapid expansion of Government agencies.

"Even if it had been possible to have an investigation in 1945," he added, "there was no coordination, no unity. One agency could make an investigation and no other agency know anything about it."

That situation, he explained, was cured by the President's loyalty program, which established regional loyalty boards and the central loyalty review board and provided for exchange of information.

He hastened to add, though, that the loyalty program was "just now beginning to function."

The subcommittee will resume its hearings today at 10 a. m.

son to suspect Hiss of subversive activities.

Silvermaster told the committee that Currie came to his aid after Naval Intelligence had written BEW what he termed "an insulting letter . . . a smear letter" charging Silvermaster with being a Communist.

Silvermaster refused to say whether or not he is or ever had been a member of the Communist Party "on the ground that any answer I may make to this question may tend to be self-incriminating." He swore under oath he had never been a spy or an agent of a foreign power.

Evidence introduced yesterday showed that reports from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Civil Service investigators and the police departments of two cities—Seattle and San Francisco—as well as Naval Intelligence had convinced Civil Service Review officers that Silvermaster was not only a Communist but "probably an agent of the OGPU (Russian secret police) as well."

May 22, 1942, an official of the Civil Service Commission, after reviewing the reports of the several investigations, recommended that Silvermaster be dropped from the Federal service.

Civil Service President Harry B. Mitchell said yesterday the commission itself never decided to have Silvermaster dropped. It was "a close case," he declared.

Bretton Woods Conference

Two years after the unsuccessful attempt to oust him, Silvermaster revealed, Harry Dexter White, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, a high policy making official of this Government, took him along to the Bretton Woods monetary conference in a sort of unofficial capacity as an "interpreter."

White's name has threaded through these hearings repeatedly. Two witnesses have declared that he was close to the Communist circle within the Government and helpful to it. It was at Bretton Woods that this Nation's financial relations to the postwar world were arranged.

Silvermaster at first omitted the Bretton Woods Conference from the employment record he gave the committee, he said, "because I was not able to carry out the task that I was supposed to have done there."

"What was the task you were supposed to have done?" asked Chief Investigator Robert E. Stripling.

"I went there upon the invitation of Mr. Harry D. White, who at that time was the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, to help him translate any documents that he may have had to deal with submitted to him by the Russians," returned Silvermaster who was born in Odessa, Russia.

He said he had an attack of asthma and stayed only two days.

Later Representative John McDowell asked:

"Were there no official interpreters there at Bretton Woods?"

"There probably were," he replied.

"Were you an official interpreter?" demanded McDowell.

"No, I was not an official interpreter," Silvermaster said.

"Why would Mr. White decide to have some person in excess of the ordinary number of interpreters?" queried McDowell.

"As I understood it at the time, the Treasury did not have an interpreter," said Silvermaster.

He added that the official interpreter was provided by the State Department.

"They decided to take me (to Bretton Woods)" Silvermaster said, "not only because of my knowledge of Russian but also because of my knowledge of economic matters. I am an economist."

Confronted in the hearing room with Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, former self-confessed courier for the Communist underground, Silvermaster declined to say whether or not he knew her.

"I refuse to answer the question on the ground that any answer I may give may be self-incriminating," Silvermaster intoned.

Photostating Story Repeated

Miss Bentley had previously sworn, and yesterday repeated, that Silvermaster had a secret photostating outfit in his former home here at 5515 30th st. nw., and that she received secret documents photostated there which she in turn handed to Russian agents in New York and to Earl Browder, now-deposed Communist Party chief.

Again and again the committee pressed Silvermaster for answers about whether he had any photographic equipment in his Washington home.

No matter how the question was phrased, Silvermaster stuck to his answer that any reply might tend to incriminate him.

Under questioning of Representative F. Edward Hebert, (D., La.), Silvermaster said he had refused to answer many questions at an executive session of the committee on May 25 because his case was before a grand jury in New York.

In a prepared statement, which he read to the committee, Silvermaster said:

"Neither the FBI nor the New York grand jury have taken any action against me although they heard the same witnesses as this committee has produced, and, I am certain, thoroughly investigated the charges made against me by Elizabeth Bentley."

But as Hebert pressed his question, Silvermaster said that "As far as I know" the grand jury is still meeting on his case.

"As far as you know then it is not a closed case?" pressed Hebert.

"That is right, sir," replied Silvermaster.

Silvermaster Agrees

"And the mere fact that you have not been indicted as of this time does not indicate you are innocent of the charges made by Miss Bentley—is that correct?" pressed Hebert.

"Yes, Sir," Silvermaster answered.

Earlier Silvermaster had indicated he expected his case would reach the courts when he said he would "reserve the right to make any further statements when any allegations she (Miss Bentley) has made against me are taken up in the courts."

Silvermaster said in his statement, which he gave under oath on the record, that "the charges made by Miss Bentley are false and fantastic. I can only conclude she is a neurotic liar."

In his prepared statement Silvermaster said he was the victim of a "diabolical conspiracy."

Enlarging upon that later under direct examination, he said, that in 1942 the FBI started coming to his house and interviewing him.

"The whole thing began to assume the character of a conspiracy against me almost to the point of looking like a possible frame-up, for all I know," he said.

"A conspiracy by the FBI?" queried Mundt.

"I don't know by whom. I don't say that," Silvermaster replied.

Then Mundt asked him if he meant a conspiracy by the committee.

"Of course not," the slightly built, gray-haired man replied.

Subsequently former FBI agent, Louis Russell, took the stand to read from the Civil Service file on Silvermaster in which in 1942 a review officer reached these conclusions:

"It will be noted that the testimony linking Silvermaster with communism and with the OGPU (the Russian Secret Police) comes not only from persons without any axe to grind who have made a study of Communist activities and personalities, but from persons who are themselves in the Communist movement or members of the Communist Party and in the best position to furnish information concerning Silvermaster.

"As in all such cases, the evidence is circumstantial. It is so strong, however, that I am convinced after reading the file that Silvermaster is in fact a Communist and a worker for the Communist cause.

Included in the Civil Service file read by Russell were the following statements:

"He is listed in the files of the Seattle Police Department as follows: Gregory N. Silvermaster, alias Gregory Masters, alias Nathan Masters, is a national committeeman-at-large of the Communist Party, USA. Silvermaster was a former Agitation Propagandist of the Fillmore subsection in San Francisco, Calif., Thirteenth District, Communist Party."

Another section of the Civil Service Commission report stated that,

"The Thirteenth Naval District files show 'original name, N. Zeilberneister, member of Communist Party in Seattle, Wash., completely underground in 1920."

Silvermaster, according to the Civil Service file, listed Harry D. White as a reference in his Civil Service file. Silvermaster said both Mr. and Mrs. White were friends of his.

Miss Bentley testified that Mr. and Mrs. Silvermaster had hidden Earl Browder from "Vigalantes" for several days during the San Francisco general strike in the early 30s. FBI and CSC reports also placed Silvermaster as a friend and associate of Harry Bridges, West Coast left-wing leader; Sam Darcy, Bruce Minton, admitted Communist; Paul Robeson and Lee Pressman.

Silvermaster testified his boss in Farm Security Administration was C. B. Baldwin, now campaign manager for Henry Wallace's Progressive Party. He said he had known Baldwin a long time.

Russell said the committee also can prove that when the 1942 investigation of Silvermaster was in progress, Civil Service communicated with Lauchlin Currie, and Currie recommended Silvermaster.

On July 16, 1942, an analyst of the Civil Service Commission, R. E. Greenfield, recommended that Silvermaster be declared "ineligible" and be barred from Government service during the duration of the war.

But while the investigation was still in progress, BEW wrote that "action looking toward Mr. Silvermaster's employment in such a position has been discontinued and any investigation which might now be in progress can be canceled."

That meant that Silvermaster still remained on the payroll of the Farm Security Administration, Agriculture Department. He had been on loan to BEW and sought a transfer to get a higher paid job.

The commission finally closed its books for the time on the whole issue with the statement that it had been determined "further investigation was necessary."

"It is doubtful if in view of the turn the case had taken," the report said, "if we have good basis for proceeding with the investigation."

Nevertheless the persistent CSC reviewer suggested that at the very least—if they couldn't get Silvermaster fired—they should ask the Department of Agriculture to look at the file.

"In this connection," wrote the CSC, "it might be pointed out that much of the evidence in the case points to the fact that Mr. Silvermaster is one of the really important operatives in the undercover Communist Party in the United States." The evidence in the file came from half a dozen localities in this country, CSC pointed out.

Received Pay Increases

Not only did Silvermaster remain on the Department of Agriculture payroll but he received several pay increases as well.

Two years after the Civil Service analyst spoke of him as "an important operative of the Communist Party," Silvermaster transferred from Agriculture to the Treasury Department. On February 1, 1945, he was promoted to a position paying $8000 a year with the Procurement Division.

Then he went to the Department of Commerce in the Surplus Property Office, and after that, on November 5, 1946, to War Assets where his salary was $10,000 per annum. Shortly before he left War Assets he was reduced in grade with a pay cut of $2000 a year. Because of that, he resigned. Now he describes himself as self-employed, building houses in Harvey Cedars, N. J.

He said he did admit knowing William Ullman, former Government employe, who has lived with him since 1937. Ullman was named by Miss Bentley as the chief photographer for the ring.

Ullman's employment record was subsequently disclosed. His immediate supervisor was Frank B. Coe, director of Monetary Research under Harry Dexter White. References for Ullman were Harry W. Blair, lawyer, Tower Building, Washington; Lauchlin Currie, Henrietta Klotz, 285 Madison ave., New York City, assistant to former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau. His first immediate supervisor in the Government was Emily Newell Blair.

Silvermaster was accompanied to the hearing by his counsel, David Rein, who said he was a member of the firm of Greenberg, Forer and Rein, 1105 K st. nw.

Routinely Silvermaster droned "I refuse to answer this question on the grounds that any answer I may give to this question may be self-incriminating" when asked about a list of persons mentioned either by Miss Bentley or by Whittaker Chambers as members of a Communist underground ring here.

This list in order went: Earl Browder, 1942 head of the Communist Party now deposed on orders transmitted through Jacques Duclos, French Communist; Jacob N. Golos, now deceased, one-time head of the central control committee of the Communist Party, described as Miss Bentley's chief; Miss Bentley, Solomon Adler, Norman Bursler, Alger Hiss, Frank B. Coe, Edward J. Fitzgerald, Harold Glasser, Sonia Gold, William J. Gold, Joseph B. Gregg, Victor Perlor, Charles Kramer, Harry Magdorff, William W. Remington, Maurice Halperin, Alex Konal.

In New York City last night former War Secretary Patterson said he had and still has every confidence in Currie. Patterson said he had never met Silvermaster, and heard of him only once during the war. He said to the best of his recollection that was when Currie telephoned him about a case in the BEW involving a man he believes was Silvermaster. He said he ordered an inquiry and later he told Currie the War Department had no objection to the man remaining in the BEW.

Currie Denies Saving Job for Silvermaster

New York, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Lauchlin Currie, former assistant to the late President Roosevelt, said tonight he had been consulted in 1942 about the loyalty of Nathan Gregory Silvermaster but had turned the whole matter over to the Army without further decision.

Currie, accused in congressional espionage hearings at Washington of being an information source for a Communist spy network, denounced as false the "accusations and innuendoes circulated about me." He said he was awaiting an opportunity to deny the charges under oath.

In a prepared statement issued from his home at Scarsdale, N. Y., Currie confirmed that Silvermaster, a member of the Board of Economic Warfare, was under investigation in 1942. Silvermaster told the House Un-American Activities Committee today that his job was saved after he appealed personally to Currie.

"I recall being consulted in 1942 about a security report made by Military Intelligence on Silvermaster," Currie said. "It was natural that I should be consulted . . . since as assistant to President Roosevelt on economic matters I had constant dealing with economists in all departments of the Government."

He said he believed he was asked about the Silvermaster case by a "ranking official" of the Board of Economics Warfare, and it was possible Silvermaster also came to see him personally.

"When . . . it appeared to involve a matter of military security . . . I referred the matter to the War Department for review as a matter of course," Currie said. "Thereupon the decision rested solely with Under Secretary of War (Robert) Patterson, in whose judgment I had every confidence.

"I never saw nor passed on this particular report nor saw any FBI or Civil Service reports on Silvermaster. I had nothing to do with his subsequent return to (the department of) Agriculture."

Currie said he had not been asked by the Un-American Activities Committee to appear before it but that he strongly hoped he would be called in order "to make my denials under oath."

Pressman Sees Inquiry A 'Shameful Circus'

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Lee Pressman, former CIO counsel and now a Wallace-for-President official, today described Washington hearings on communism as a "shameful circus."

Yesterday in Washington, Whittaker Chambers, senior editor of Time magazine, told the House Committee on Un-American Activities that Pressman once was a member of an underground Communist organization led by men at key government posts in Washington.

U. S. Communist Party Charges Red Probes Are Conspiracy to Bring About Atomic War

New York, Aug. 4 (AP). — The American Communist Party said today the Washington Communist probes are a bipartisan conspiracy to defeat Soviet peace moves and bring on an atomic war.

The party's fourteenth national convention adopted a resolution charging the investigations are "the answer of American warmongers to the latest Soviet peace initiative."

The peace initiative was described as the recent exchange of letters by Premier Stalin and Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party presidential candidate.

The resolution said "American warmongers" want to "scuttle any possibility of new negotiations that might hinder their war program."

The convention described the anti-Communist witnesses before the congressional committees as "labor spies and stool pigeons."

The probes were arranged, the resolution said, "to take the people's minds off their troubles."

Republicans, it charged, are trying to get votes "by smearing former New Deal officials . . . and the Progressive Party, instead of passing poll tax legislation, halting inflation and correcting the housing situation."

The resolution assailed President Truman's administration of inflation, housing and civil rights, and charged Democrats with attacking "the Roosevelt tradition and its standard bearer in the 1948 elections, Henry Wallace."

Henry Winston, the party's organizational secretary, earlier said the American Communist Party now has 60,000 members—more than 7000 of them recruited since 1945.

Winston claimed a 250 per cent growth in Communist "community clubs" since 1945, when Earl Browder was deposed as party leader. Winston said there are now 3000 community clubs.

The convention said it received greetings today from the Communist parties of Mexico, Italy and Czechoslovakia.

A telegram from Dionisio Ancino, general secretary of the Mexican Communists, expressed unity in the struggle "against Yankee imperialism."

The Czechoslovak Communist Central Committee said the American Communist Party "stands in the forefront of all progressive and peace-loving forces in America, of all forces fighting against warmongering and American imperialists."

Wallace Ballot Okayed in Wisconsin

Madison, Wisc., Aug. 4 (AP).—State Attorney General Grover Broadfoot ruled today that the Secretary of State may place Henry Wallace's name on the November election ballot in Wisconsin despite the fact that there is a variance in names used by the party.

Wallace's national party has adopted the name "Progressive." In Wisconsin the party took the name "People's Progressive" to avoid being identified with the former Wisconsin Progressive Party.

Tom Wallace Retires

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 4 (U.P.)—Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times, today announced his retirement, effective September 15. Wallace, 73, will become editor emeritus, turning the active editorship over to Associate Editor Russell Briney.

Ohio Party Chief

Twelfth Red Surrenders In Cleveland

Cleveland, Aug. 4 (AP).—Gus Hall, 37-year-old Ohio chairman of the Communist Party, surrendered to Federal authorities here today to face charges by a New York grand jury that he and 11 others sought to overthrow the United States Government.

Gus Hall

Hall's surrender completed the roundup of the 12 persons indicted July 20 by a special grand jury which sat for more than a year.

The husky, 240-pound Hall, well sun-tanned, refused to say where he had been during the past two weeks Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were searching for him.

Assistant United States District Attorney John J. Kane said Hall came to his office this afternoon after first telephoning from the office of Attorney Jerome Land.

The FBI took Hall into custody and fingerprinted him. He then was placed under $5000 bond to appear at 10 a. m. Friday for a hearing. At that time it is expected Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin will issue an order for his removal to New York.

Of the 12 persons indicted, seven, including Communist Party Chairman William Z. Foster, were taken into custody the day they were indicted and two others surrendered in the next two days. The indictments alleged a plot by the Communist high command to bring about the forcible overthrow of the Government.

N. C. Sanctions Wallaceites, Bars Dixiecrats

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 4 (AP).—The State Board of Elections recognized Henry Wallace's Progressive Party of North Carolina today.

It refused to recognize the anti-Truman States' Rights Democrats.

Board Chairman Hubert E. Olive said in handing down the denial that "I think it is clear that the petition of the States' Rights Democrats doesn't comply with rules and regulations of the board."

Plan Court Fight

There was no way to determine today that qualified voters had signed petitions asking that the names of Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi be placed on the general election ballot. Thurmond is the new party's presidential candidate; Wright, its vice presidential candidate.

The States' Righters previously had said they would carry their cause to the courts if a denial were issued by the State Elections Board.

Olive today requested Attorney General Harry McMullen to cooperate with the new party in bringing a test case into the courts "at the earliest possible moment."

Sept. 1 Action Set

McMullen told reporters that he thought the case could be presented to the State Supreme Court by September 1.

The elections board ruled that names of Progressive Party candidates could be placed on general election ballots, provided they are furnished the board of elections by September 1.

The board voted to recognize the Progresive Party after Olive announced the Progressive Party had furnished petitions signed by 11,143 qualified voters, and had thus complied with the law which requires petitions signed by 10,000 persons.

Constitution Aids Union Chief on Hill

By the United Press

Three Congressmen spent an hour and a half yesterday questioning a $100-a-week official of a New York drugstore union on the implications of American foreign policy and world communism.

Their aim was to determine whether Local 1199 of the Retail Drugstore Employes Union was Communist-dominated. Local President Leon J. Davis wouldn't tell them. He said his lawyer told him that under the Constitution he didn't have to.

Davis said the Communists had never done Local 1199 any harm. He said he supposed there were Communists — "and Socialist and Democrats and Republicans" — among its 3800 members who fill out prescriptions and sell lipstick, cigars and sandwiches in independent New York City drugstores. Representative Charles J. Kersten (R., Wis.) asked Davis if he felt the local's members had the right to know whether he was a Communist. Davis said they never asked, but if they did he supposed he would answer.

Davis said he was pretty proud of Local 1199. He said he organized it himself and at first it was tough going. From 1932 to 1934, he said, he "organized" only seven members. Now the union covers 55 per cent of New York's drugstores at minimum salaries of almost double what they were in 1939.

His own job, he said, paid $100 a week plus a $25 expense account.

Kersten asked Davis what he thought of American foreign policy. Davis said he didn't know much about it, but lots of people were disturbed because we were supporting "elements which have been Fascistic in the past."

"We are supporting a 'reactionary Fascist regime in Greece,'" he said. The Marshall plan? He didn't know enough about it to comment. The Communist coup in Czechoslovakia? Well, that was entirely up to the Czech people. As for Berlin, we ought to get together with the Russians and stop this "war hysteria."

Without invading his rights, Davis found he was able to tell the Congressmen that he felt the Communist were "just an ordinary political party" and that they had helped American labor by supporting things like social security and employment insurance.

Those constitutional rights kept him from clarifying his views as to any tie-up between American Communists and Moscow.

Representative Carrol Kearns (R., Pa.) said the Constitution seemed to be getting an awful going-over.

"I think it's a god thing we've got it," said Davis.

Ex-Red Editor To Testify in Hawaii Probe

Honolulu, Aug. 4 (AP).—The Hawaii board of school commissioners today recessed an ouster hearing for two veteran teachers until tomorrow, when it will hear former Communist Louis Budenz as its first witness.

Budenz, who edited the New York Daily Worker until he quit the Communist Party in 1945, flew here from Washington in order to testify to asserted Communist infiltration in Hawaii.

The teachers, accused of being Communist Party members and suspended last November, are Dr. and Mrs. John E. Reinecke.

Their counsel, Myer C. Symonds, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union attorney, lost two attempts today to delay the board's formal hearing on the ouster charges.

The board first overruled his contention that it was without authority to act. Then several members accused of bias refused to disqualify themselves. They denied bias.

Budenz says the party regarded its Hawaii organization as "important, and successful to some measure."

Budenz talked to newsmen on his arrival by air last night from San Francisco.

Budenz told his news conference last night that Communists would naturally want a strong organization here "if they could establish it, because of Hawaii's strategic importance to America's defense."

He said he recalled discussions at national party headquarters in New York which showed that party work in Hawaii was regarded as "an important operation."

Asked if it were regarded as "successful in getting done what the Communists wanted done," Budenz replied:

"Yes, the work in Hawaii was regarded as successful in some measure. You must remember it was done under the supervision of the California district" (of the party).

West Envoys In Moscow Get Replies

By Joseph Newman

Moscow, Aug. 4 (NYHT).—The envoys of the United States, Britain and France received today the replies of their governments to their reports on the meeting Monday night with Prime Minister Stalin and Foreign Minister Viacheslav M. Molotov.

After they had received instructions from Washington, London and Paris, Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, American Ambassador; Frank Roberts, secretary to British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, and French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau conferred for an hour at the British Embassy tonight.

They declined to say whether a final agreement was reached among the three Western powers to accept the arrangements discussed at the Kremlin for the conduct of four-power negotiations.

It appears, however, that only details remain to be ironed out before the expected announcement later this week that such agreement has been reached by the four powers.

Stalin's reaction to the approach of the three Western powers to discuss differences on the Berlin situation and Germany as a whole is believed to have been favorable, and Washington, London and Paris are expected to approve whatever modifications may be necessary in the terms arranged at the Kremlin conference.

If an agreement is reached to announce simultaneously an improvement in the Berlin situation and the convocation of the Council of Foreign Ministers, arrangements must be made to fix the time and place for a four-power conference. The most likely time, it is believed, would be shortly before the United Nations General Assembly meeting next month, and the place Paris, where the Assembly is scheduled to meet.

The envoys may have their next meeting with Molotov Thursday night or Friday and a definite decision is expected before the end of the week, unless more than one meeting will be necessary to work out the details with the Soviet foreign minister.

Stalin Reported Asking Delay on German State

London, Aug. 4 (NYHT).—Premier Stalin was reported here today to have suggested that the Western powers postpone implementation of their agreement to establish a western German government as part of a bargain for settlement of the Berlin situation.

It is regarded in diplomatic quarters here as a certainty that the Russians will not call off the Berlin blockade without asking for some concession from the Western powers.

Marshall Meets Press

can be continued, or whether nothing less than direct action could advance them.

Since last spring, the Soviets have received a series of setbacks.

They were defeated in the Italian elections. They failed to obtain concessions from Finland. They were again rebuffed in France. They have seen the beginnings of a Western Union. And within their own orbit, Yugoslavia, a serious and remarkable dissension has surfaced.

As these actions developed, political experts in Washington began to expect a moment of decision. They began asking whether the Soviets could afford to permit this pattern of events to continue. Or would some new line be necessary?

U. S. Election a Factor

Meanwhile, it is an election year in the United States.

The possible effect of the coming campaigns on American internal unity certainly is under closest study in the Kremlin these days. In the past, other nations have misjudged the internal turmoil that besets America during a presidential fight.

They found that the family squabble could end quickly, and the ranks would close at once, in the face of a threat from outside.

But this year, a new element—the Wallace Progressives—has entered the equation. It may very well assist the Russians in making that same misjudgment.

The Russians could very easily overestimate the importance, on the American scene as a whole, of the Shibe Park rally, in Philadelphia several weeks ago.

The Shibe Park Rally

There, "Wall Street imperialists," and "warmongers" were attacked. It was stated, flatly, that "we should get out of Berlin." And the Government was assailed for spending money on rearmament and the Marshall Plan.

These things were said by Americans. More than 30,000 other Americans roared out applause—and even danced with joy on the field—at the hearing of them.

A foreign observer, especially if he were present to feel the temper of the crowd, might very well conclude that complete American unity had ceased to exist. If he were a Russian observer and heard American foreign policy compared, unfavorably, to Russian foreign policy, the inducement could be even greater.

For these reasons, Washington official circles are hopeful, but not brimming with optimism, about the Moscow talks.

Belgrade, Aug. 4 (AP).—The United States was ready tonight to lay before the 11-nation Danubian Conference its proposals to unchain the Danube.

The American stand, to be presented tomorrow by United States Ambassador Cavendish Cannon, will turn down a Russian plan and call for free navigation of the 1800-mile international waterway by all nations with no strings attached.

American diplomats said Cannon will tell Russia and eastern Europe's Communist-dominated countries that the United States will not approve a Danubian pact unless it spells out clearly terms for free navigation.

The Russian plan, presented to the conference today, would place the Danube under exclusive control of the Communist bloc from Austria southward. It would give each country immediate supervision over ship movements in its own waters.

United States delegates, after analysis of the Soviet proposals, have concluded the plan would serve only to freeze the present status of the river.

Since shortly after the war, Russia has closed the river below Linz, Austria, to all non-Soviet shipping. This has tied up about 700 river craft and barges in the American zones of Austria and Germany. The United States would like to use this fleet in moving commerce in the European Recovery Program.

Cannon probably will demand also a seat for at least one representative from the Western powers to serve as a watchdog on the commission's activities.

East and West Agree on Joint Europe Effort

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Russia and the Western powers reached unanimous agreement on future East-West economic collaboration in Europe today at the seventh session of the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

All 18 nations in the council, including the United States and Britain, voted favorably on a resolution approving the work of the U. N. Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) and encouraging it to develop East-West trade.

Russia's A. A. Arutiunian said the ECE offered "a common ground on which we can meet, despite divergencies. It is the only organ of its type which has managed to bring together all the European countries in the U. N., and also attracts cooperation from non-U. N. countries."

Earlier in the session, Arutiunian bitterly attacked the Marshall Plan and insisted the ECE be instructed to carry out European aid programs without reference to American assistance "except in the framework of the United Nations."

The Council's human rights committee approved a resolution today on freedom of marriage that deplored laws that forbid mixed marriages.

The resolution was introduced by Canada as a compromise between the United States and Russian proposals, which had deadlocked the committee for two weeks.

The United States resolution asked information from governments on the right of women married to foreigners to leave their homelands. The Russians, who have refused to permit the Russian wives of Western citizens to leave the Soviet Union, accused the United States of inserting that question into its resolution "for political reasons" and threatened to bring up American laws against marriage between whites and Negroes.

The compromise resolution deplored laws "forbidding mixed marriages between persons differing in color, nationality, race or religion."

Jap Cabinet Seen 'Puppet'

Tokyo, Aug. 4 (AP).—The leader of Japan's Communists charged today Premier Hitoshi Ashida's cabinet "has become a puppet government of foreign capital."

Party Secretary Kyuichi Tokuda addressed a mass meeting of followers in downtown Tokyo. He had just returned from Kyushu where he barely escaped an assassin's bomb while on a speaking tour.

Tokuda declared the hour had struck for "a great counteroffensive" against the Ashiba cabinet.

On the platform as he spoke was Kazuyoshi Dobashi, head of the Communist-influenced Government Communications Workers Union.

This union is expected to spearhead a challenge to the government Saturday by joining a general strike. The Ashida government, on General MacArthur's suggestion, has banned strikes by government workers.

Reds Demand All Berlin Use 'Ostmarks'

Berlin, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—The Russians, in a bid to seize complete financial and economic control of Greater Berlin, demanded today that their own new "Ostmark" currency be made the only valid currency in the entire city.

The Russian demand was made on the German city assembly. It prescribes that all city financial transactions shall be made solely in Russian-issued currency, and that all Berlin business enterprises including those in the western sectors, be conducted with the Russian marks.

Allies' Aid Asked

German authorities appealed to the Western Allies for aid in opposing the Russian demand.

Other developments in the German situation were:

1. American military police sought Rene Oshana, 36, Chicago, an American civilian adviser who disappeared yesterday afternoon on his way from his office to the American Templehof airdrome. It was believed he strayed into the Russian sector by mistake and was arrested.

2. William Kuhnast, former attorney general for Berlin, evaded Red police watching his home and escaped last night into the American sector. It was reported that American sector police arrested two armed Soviet sector police who followed him across the border.

Barbed Wire Erected

3. Germans living in the Kamshorst section reported the Russians have erected barbed wire roadblocks around their army headquarters and the area reserved for billets of Russian dependents.

4. American planes broke their own record by making 314 flights to Berlin with 2201 tons of supplies in the 24 hours ended at 4 p. m. British planes made 260 flights with 1480 tons.

5. Twelve United States Air Force F-80 jet fighter planes were landed at Glasgow, Scotland, on their way to reinforce the fleet in Germany. Sixty-nine more are due this weekend.

6. Russian sources admitted the Berlin-Helmstedt railroad to the western occupation zones, closed 47 days ago as part of the blockade, is now servicable. This admission came in an announcement in the Russian-licensed newspaper Berliner Zeitung that 45 special trains would pass through the Russian zone from the western zones to the Leipzig Fair between August 29 and September 5.

Senator Watson's Will Leaves All to Widow

The will of former Senator James E. Watson (R., Ind.) was filed yesterday in District Court here. The testament, dated October 7, 1909, leaves his entire estate to the widow, Flora M. Watson, of the Presidential Apartments.

According to Attorney Thomas Grant, jr., who is handling the estate, its value will not become known until a petition for probate is filed. Senator Watson died July 28 at the age of 84.

Soviet Backs Yugoslavia Over Trieste

Lake Success, Aug. 4 (AP).—Despite Cominform attacks on Marshal Tito, Soviet Russia and the Ukraine backed Yugoslavia today in a fight with the west over Trieste.

There was not the slightest sign in the United Nations Security Council of the rift in Communist circles caused by the blasts of the Communist International Information Bureau against the head of the Yugoslav state.

Yugoslavia brought up the Council fight by charging the United States and Britain with violating the Italian peace treaty. Dr. Joza Vilfan, Yugoslav delegate, declared the Western powers were trying to make their zone of the Trieste territory a Province of Italy.

Dr. Philip C. Jessup, United States deputy, and Sir Alexander Cadogan, Britain, replied that Yugoslavia had no foundation for the charges.

Jessup and Cadogan said they were surprised that such charges should come from a government which, in administering its zone of the Trieste territory, had paid no heed to international obligations and had not even made a report to the Security Council.

Alexandre Parodi, France, called upon Yugoslavia to submit a report to the Council. That touched off Slav fireworks.

Dmitri Z. Manuilsky, Soviet Ukrainian Foreign Minister, said he was "astounded" at attempts to put the Yugoslav charges aside by all kinds of irrelevant and secondary considerations. He said it would be inappropriate to broaden the case to inquire into the Yugoslav occupation zone.

Jakob A. Malik, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, backed up Manuilsky and Vilfan. He said the United States and Britain were trying to divert attention from the Yugoslav charges. He said the Council must consider the case speedily.

Abdullah Asks Full Study On Peace Plans

Cairo, Aug. 4 (AP).—King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan asked today for full and careful consideration of any future proposals for permanent peace in Palestine.

He told a news conference in Amman his "Arab nation does not exclude any possible compromise that secures justice and prevents unnecessary bloodshed.

"We would like that the efforts of Count Bernadotte in the refugee problem be successful, and afterwards that any new proposals (for a Palestine settlement) which he will make should not be rejected outright but be fully discussed before they are put in final form," he said.

Refugees Called Test

Observers took his statement to mean Trans-Jordan will insist the Arab League give full consideration to Bernadotte's next peace plan expected in September.

The king said the question of returning hundreds of thousands of Arab refugees to Jewish-held areas of Palestine "is one of the tests to prove good faith."

Count Bernadotte, the U. N. mediator, said in Alexandria that he had asked the Security Council to affirm the right of more than 300,000 Arab refugees to return to their homes in Palestine.

(In Tel Aviv, Israel intelligence estimated 150 Jews were killed and 120 seriously injured in Cairo riots July 25. The report said hundreds were dragged from streetcars and forced to run a gantlet of "tough guys who slaughtered them with knives while the police refused to interfere.")

Israel Protests Cyprus Detention

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Israel formally complained to the United Nations Security Council today against Britain's detention of 11,000 Jews on the Island of Cyprus.

In asking the Council to take up the matter, Israel charged that Britain's policy on the Cyprus refugees was a violation of the Holy Land armistice.

Malay Troops Fight Through Communists

Singapore, Aug. 4 (AP).—Gurkha and Malay troops, aided by low-flying RAF Spitfires, fought through heavy Communist insurgent opposition and reached Pulai, 80 miles south of the Siamese border, today.

Pulai, populated by Chinese, was the original objective of a British column which was engaged with insurgents yesterday. The British communique described the action as a "battle"—the first time the word has been used officially in the Malayan Communist revolt.

Siamese police in Bangkok announced 300 men armed with modern weapons had been dispatched by special train to the southern province of Singora to reinforce three regiments of police sweeping the area for guerillas fleeing across the border into Siam from Malaya.

Italy Declared Ready to Join United Europe

Rome, Aug. 4 (AP).—Count Carlo Sforza, Italy's Foreign Minister, declared in an interview today that his country is ready to join a union of European nations.

Union is the only cure for Europe's economic and political difficulties and the hope of peace, he said.

To bring it about, he added, Italy is ready to "accept curtailment of its political sovereignty even in the most unexpected aspects," provided others do the same.

(In Paris, Finance Minister Paul Reynaud also urged a United States of Europe. In a speech prepared for delivery at an Anglo-American Press Association luncheon, he said the "structural reform of Europe" was necessary to encourage the United States to continue its aid. He expressed the hope that Britain this fall "will join us in this great pacific work.")

European nations "must restrain in their economic life useless competition and divergent efforts" to assure "bread and work and the peace of the man in the street," Sforza said.

Korea Cabinet Is Completed

Seoul, Korea, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Dr. Syngman, Rhee, president of South Korea, completed formation of his cabinet today with the appointments of Seoul Police Chief T. S. Chang as Foreign Secretary and Miss Louise Yim as Secretary of Commerce.

Chang was educated in England and France and has traveled in the United States.

Other cabinet ministers include: Defense Secretary and Prime Minister, Gen. Lee Bum Suk; Communications, Yoon Suk Koo; Labor, Chun Chin Han; Education, Ahn Ho Sang; Interior, Yun Tohai; Finance, Kim Do Yun; Transportation, Min Hi Sik; Justice, Lee; Agriculture, Cho Bong Ahr.

All Foreign Schools Closed By Bulgaria and Romania

Prague, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Romania and Bulgaria closed all foreign schools and Czechoslovakia restricted their teachings today in a new move by the "People's Democracies" to isolate their citizens from western influences.

In Bucharest, the Official Gazette published a sweeping decree shutting down "all foreign schools in Romania established and maintained by governments or institutions of other countries, or by communities or associations of foreign citizens." The schools were closed regardless of the language spoken in classrooms.

Simultaneously, the presidium of the Bulgarian Parliament decreed the closing of all foreign schools effective September 1, and denounced its December, 1936, school convention with France.

One American and six French colleges were affected by the Bulgarian decree. French schools will be permitted to continue classes for nine months, but Bulgarian children may not attend them after September 1.

Diplomatic missions in Bulgaria were offered permission to open schools for their own nationals. The language of the Bucharest decree apparently closed even this avenue for foreigners in Romania.

Szechoslovakia announced that French and English schools would be shorn of their four lower grades, but that upper grades could continue under ministry of education supervision.

A ministry spokesman said negotiations still were in progress regarding the status of a Soviet school here, which covers all grades from nursery through high school.

Another report from Bucharest said Romania's new national school law went into effect today. It eliminates all private or institutional schools, including several hundred Catholic schools, and places all education under the state.

Boy, 9, on Bay Isle Leads Life of Jungle

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 4 (AP).—An emaciated, unkempt 9-year-old boy appeared before Judge W. Laird Henry in Dorchester County Juvenile Court today and told a story of leading a jungle life on an island in Chesapeake Bay.

Judge Henry gave the boy's father, Virgil Price, a suspended two-year sentence in the Maryland House of Correction for neglecting the boy, Robert Lee Price.

The father must pay $32 a month for his support as a condition of staying out of the House of Correction.

The boy had been living on James Island, a virtually isolated spot near the mouth of the Little Choptank River adjoining Taylor Island.

The evidence showed he had been living there in squalor with an unmarried couple as his only companions. Most of the time he had no shelter, and very little to eat.

It was testified that the Prices separated in 1941 and turned Robert over to the couple, who took him to the island about five months ago.

Further testimony showed he had had no schooling before or since that time.

The island itself is owned by a lumber firm and normally is uninhabited.

The Dorchester County Welfare Board brought the boy to Cambridge two weeks ago after receiving a report on his existence, and charges were brought against his father.

The board placed Robert in the custody of a family in Madison, Md., 16 miles south of here.

J. L. Proctor Killed by Car, Driver Is Held

Clarence A. Phelps, 39, a painter, of 5360 Oxon Hill rd., Md., yesterday was charged with manslaughter, reckless driving and driving under the influence of liquor after James Lewis Proctor, 62, 5650 Bock rd., Oxon Hill, died in Providence Hospital.

According to Prince Georges County Policemen B. E. Richards and L. Peed, Proctor was struck by Phelps' car Sunday while crossing in the 5300 block of Oxon Hill rd.

Proctor, an employe of the Capital Transit Co. for 28 years died yesterday in Providence Hospital. Phelps was released in a total of $2100 bond for appearance August 13 in Upper Marlboro Police Court.

Earlier in the day, three persons escaped injury in a freak accident 2 miles east of Centerville, Va., on Route 211.

A sedan which police said was driven by Anna M. Graybill, 47, 816 E st. ne., blew a tire as the car was traveling westward.

The vehicle hurled off the right side of the road making a complete turnover as it plunged down a 5-foot bank. The passengers changed the tire, police reported, and the auto moved away under its own power, with a few dents as evidence of the mishap.

Police said that about 3 feet of water covered the bottom of the embankment and had the car landed on its top, all three passengers might have drowned.

Rains Damage Crops, Roads

gave little immediate hope for an end to the rain.

The five-day rain along the lower Eastern Shore of Maryland also resulted in many blocked roads, washed-out dams and ruptured communication lines.

In Virginia, rain-induced rot menaces the four-million-dollar tomato crop, three-fourths of which is still in the fields, as well as the one-million-dollar peach harvest, according to Henry M. Taylor, chief statistician for the State agriculture department.

Continued rain, Taylor said, may also kill leaves of the 50-million-dollar flue-cured tobacco crop.

Corn Benefiting

However, the most valuable crop in the State, corn, valued at 100 million dollars is benefiting by rain which develops large, well-filled ears, he pointed out.

In the Greater Washington area, Montgomery County Supervisor I. G. McNayr estimated damage to county bridges and streets at more than $200,000. Damage, he said, was largely in Forest Glen and Indian Spring Village areas in Silver Spring.

The damage "set the county back at least two weeks in its road-building and maintenance program," McNayr said. More than 60 road blocks were set up by police on swamped county roads.

In the District, 17 hours and 45 minutes of continuous rain, starting at 10:30 p. m. Tuesday, finally dried up at 4:15 p. m. yesterday. The fall totaled 1.32 inches.

Over Monthly Norm

Yesterday's showers brought the rain total for the first four days of August to an estimated 4.40 inches —almost half an inch more than the 50-year normal fall for the entire month, 4.01 inches.

Mostly cloudy and cool, with some rain likely this morning, is the forecast for today. Highest temperatures are expected to be in the mid-seventies.

Friday should be fair and cool. An expected approach of cooler, drier air from the Northwest promises rain-free weather the next few days.

High temperature yesterday was 74 at 1:46 p. m. and low was 69 at 8:58 a. m.

Noted Surgeon's Missing Son Found Air Force Private

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Robert Eugene Potts, 21, son of a noted "blue baby" surgeon, was found today—a private in the Army Air Force in Texas.

He had been missing from classes at the University of Rochester since June 2. Last week his father appealed for help in finding him.

The father, Dr. Willis J. Potts, said he wanted to have his son by his side when he underwent surgery. The operation, for a gall bladder condition, was successfully performed last Saturday.

A spokesman at Children's Memorial Hospital—where he is on the staff—said Dr. Potts heard from his son today. Young Potts had enlisted at Lackland Airfield, near San Antonio.

Robert, married and the father of two small children, disappeared almost on the eve of completion of his third year at the University of Rochester.

Man Goes Free On 108th Court Visit in Year

David Douglas Davenport, 31, made his 108th appearance in about a year yesterday in Municipal Court and walked out a free man.

The self-admitted Union Station bootlegger, looking rested and tanned after a recent month's stay in the Occoquan Workhouse, came in to answer a warrant charging him with assaulting a cook of the Union Station coffee shop.

The United States Attorney's office decided, however, not to press charges because of evidence of provocation and self-defense.

According to the statements, Davenport bought a sausage sandwich in the coffee shop August 2 and complained about its size. It wasn't long after that the cook, Herbert S. Hutchins, 34, and Davenport were embroiled outside.

Davenport refused to give his address and refused to confirm or deny that he is still bootlegging. He said he preferred to call himself a vendor of "miscellaneous merchandise."

Webster Eviction Case Up Today

An Alexandria Corporation Court jury today is scheduled to hear a retrial of the 12-month eviction fight between the Alexandria Housing Authority and Army veteran John M. Webster.

The housing authority's appeal from a police court ruling which permitted Webster to remain in his Cameron Valley home resulted in a "hung jury" on June 29. Today's trial is set for 10 a. m.

Webster, 33, of 142 Williams st., in the war housing development, will conduct his own defense. A lawyer in private practice, Webster won the first round of the case in Alexandria Civil and Police Court, after he was given notice to vacate last September.

Questioned in Society Gambling Inquiry

IT'S ALL A MYSTERY—Cafe society trooped into the district attorney's office in New York yesterday for investigation of a gambling bazaar in a Park ave. apartment last week, when prominent socialites allegedly were gypped out of thousands of dollars in the name of charity. Bill to Abolish Broken Troth Suits Offered

A bill to abolish court suits in the District for breach of promise to marry was introduced yesterday by Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), a member of the House District Committee.

Beall said he prepared the bill because such suits have been "used as an instrument of blackmail and fraud" and that abuses of the suits have led to "humiliation, embarrassment and intimidation of innocent persons."

The Sixth District Representative pointed out that laws permitting such suits in California, Indiana, Michigan, New Jersey and New York have been abolished.

"Marriage is an institution of the utmost importance to society, and should be entered into in good faith and only after careful consideration. Even where there exists an engagement to marry it is better for the engagement to end if one of the parties loses the desire for the marriage . . . Forced marriages lead to divorce and broken homes," he declared.

"In many cases where suits for breach of promise to marry are brought no engagement ever existed. But engagement or no engagement, I feel that the passage of the bill will prevent grave injustices being done in the name of the law," he added.

U. S. Will Reestablish Fish Mart News Office

The Federal Government will reestablish fishery market news services for Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina next Monday.

The Fish and Wildlife Service said it would reopen the Hampton Va., office to report landings and fish production at Norfolk, Hampton, Newport News, Phoebus, Crisfield, Ocean City and other Eastern Shore points, and at the Beaufort-Morehead City area in North Carolina. Charles D. Stewart will be in charge.

Socialite Party Sponsor, Winner Still a Mystery

New York, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—The district attorney's office looked like a plush night spot today as cafe socialites streamed in to tell about the "gambling-for-charity" party they attended in a Park ave. penthouse.

Who staged the party, who won all the money, who paid the $1700 bill for food and drinks was still a mystery.

Today's star-studded cast included Mrs. Vivienne Woolley-Hart, socialite in whose apartment the party was held; Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, fighter turned comedian; shapely socialite Beverly Paterno, Miami, Fla.; beauty Jacqueline Cooke and two spokesmen for a relief committee falsely advertised as the party's sponsor.

Everybody had a different story and police were sure of only two things—there was a party, there was gambling. They believed it was staged by professional gamblers under the guise of charity.

Mrs. Woolley-Hart, limping slightly from an injured ankle, said she had a letter from a medical relief and clinic association asking for the use of her apartment for a party. It bore the names of prominent people, she said.

Though she previously had been quoted as saying she didn't attend the party, she admitted to reporters she was there all evening.

The two spokesmen for the medical and surgical relief committee said their organization did not sponsor the party, although requested to do so, and did not benefit from it.

Doctor Claims Preventive For Polio

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—A North Carolina Veterans Hospital doctor felt tonight that he had found a preventive for infantile paralysis.

Cut out the sugars and starches in your meals and in 24 hours' time you stand a good chance of being immune to the polio virus, Dr. Benjamin P. Sandler said.

Sandler is a physician at the Oteen Veterans Hospital at Asheville, one of the cities which have been under siege for nearly two months against the State's worst polio invasion in history.

Ten years ago, Sandler said, he with other doctors began intensive polio experiments on rabbits at New York's Morrisania Hospital Laboratories. At that time he became the first researcher ever to transmit the polio virus to supposedly "paralysis-proof" rabbits.

Sandler expalined his answer easily in one word: Diet.

Polio victims, the VA doctor says, frequently have a low blood sugar content.

"This is caused in turn, curiously, by eating sugars and starches," he said:

"Cut out those foods and in one day's time the body builds up sufficient resistance to ward off the polio virus. I am willing to state this without reserve."

Sandler's program to avoid polio calls for avoiding all sweet foods. Soft drinks, fruits, ice cream, candy are out, he warns. Starches, such as bread or rolls, pancakes or potatoes, are just so much dynamite.

As a further preventive, Sandler advised, it's smart to eat plenty of protein protective foods. Meats, fish, poultry, milk and milk products all contain a lot of protein.

"Rest, too," he continued. "Avoid over-exertion, but be sure and eat three substantial meals a day."

"I am talking about this discovery now," he said, "because I think the polio crisis requires immediate release of all our research findings."

D. C. Rejects Out-of-Town Auctioneer

The District Commissioners yesterday orally denied a request by a New York auction firm for permission to handle sale of the Washington Gas Light Co. properties at 26th and Virginia ave. nw.

The firm is Joseph P. Day & Co., which was represented at the hearing yesterday by Joseph P. Day. Day indicated he would file a formal request with the Commissioners for permission to sell the property. The Commissioners said they intended to deny the formal request.

Present regulations require six months' residence here by auctioneers before they may conduct sales in the District.

Big Pinball Fee Sought

Councilman Carroll F. Palmer of Bladensburg, Md., said last night he will propose that a $1000 license fee be required for operation of pinball and slot machines in the town.

He said he will make the suggestion at the town council meeting Friday at 8 p. m. in the Bladensburg fire house.

Palmer said he has heard that some proprietors, contrary to town and county law, are paying cash prizes to slot and pinball machine winners although the machines are labeled "for amusement only."

The councilman, who is chairman of the ordinances committee, said he plans also to suggest that town licenses be required for carnival operators. Licenses now are issued by the county commissioners, he said.

Councilman Leonard G. Simpson, police committee chairman, reported he will ask for employment of three full-time policemen. The force now includes one full-time and one part-time policemen.

D. C. Not Most Interesting Spot For 590 Out of 600 Residents

Ask a Washingtonian the most interesting place he's ever been and the answer won't be, as perhaps you think, Washington.

At least, 590 District residents out of 600 who were asked don't think so.

They were the persons who entered the recently ended radio contest sponsored by the travel bureau service, District of Columbia division of the American Automobile Association. And they came up with some lulus for interesting places:

To one man it was the stark, uninhabited wastes of Antarctica; to another it was wartime Paris. To one woman it was—of all places—an Arabian harem; to another it was the peaceful Iowa countryside.

First prize (a trip to Bermuda for two, all expenses paid) went to Mrs. Mary S. Fellows of 4040 Fessenden st. nw. Mrs. Fellows, in four terse paragraphs, asserted that Alaska has everything now and a great future to boot.

Three second prize awards (weekend in New York, expenses paid) were made. One went to J. Harry Phillips, jr. of 2222 I st. nw., who held forth on his home town—Washington.

Lili Oliver Asher of 930 K st. nw., also came up with a second prize for her homey prose on the State of Iowa, which she saw as a USO camp shows artist during the war.

To Seymour Chalfin, 2334 19th st. nw., the other second prize winner, Paris was "an emotional experience." He saw that city as a soldier before the war ended.

It was Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, daughter-in-law of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, who wrote of "Four Hours in King Ibn Saud's Harem." With her husband, she was the King's guest.

At a luncheon with the ruler's four wives they asked her "housewifely questions about my husband and children." Then Mrs. Roosevelt said, Um Talal, the favorite wife, mused: "It must be nice to have a husband all to yourself."

Antarctica—"Beauty in an icebox"—was a "strange and fascinating . . . uninhabited land" to Dennis A. Wagner of 5012 Columbia pike, Arlington.

The four top winners will be interviewed at 10 a. m. today over Station WQQW, the station that carried the contest.

Veteran Says Too Much Help Spoils a House

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (AP).—Roy Webb's joy of living has been killed by other people's kindnesses.

Webb, a war veteran, lost his home and belongings in a fire several months ago. His troubles began when neighbors colletced $772 to help him.

Here are his complaints:

"Everyone is careful to mention how much he contributed. I've added it all up and it comes to about $5000.

"They all think I'm a millionaire because one group said it was going to try to raise $7000 for me.

"The neighbors expected me to build a new house overnight. I've had to spend so much time at it I lost my job as a sign erector.

"Carpenters, electricians, plasterers and others volunteered to help, but none ever showed up.

"People wouldn't let me build the kind of house I wanted. I wanted something fabricated, but they all insist I build something more expensive."

Webb said he is selling the half-completed house so he can return the contributions.

A spokesman from the group which rounded up the contributions sympathized, "some of the persons may be jealous and patronizing, but the donations were made from the kindness of our hearts. He doesn't owe us anything and I'm sure no one will accept the return of their donations."

4-H Rally Told Freedom Is Choicest Gift

This country has advanced as far as it has because of freedom, "our most precious possession," Dr. Roger B. Corbett told Maryland members of the 4-H Clubs yesterday.

The Maryland members are holding a week-long conference at the University of Maryland, where Dr. Corbett is associate dean of the agricultural college and associate director of the extension service.

Dr. Corbett described freedom as the dignity, respect, honor, and responsibility of the individual. He contrasted this country and its freedom with the controlled regime where the "individual is just a tool."

"Freedom is 10 million businessmen making their own decisions and trying to accomplish as much as they can on their own," he declared.

Following his talk, the members debated whether conservation of human rights is more important than soil conservation. Equally divided in opinion, they finally agreed both were closely tied together.

Among 100 girls, who were awarded ribbons yesterday in the exhibits of food, needle art and hobbies were Margaret M. Wear, 14, of Germantown; Genevieve Mumford, 13, of Route 2, Silver Spring; Sandra Summers of Prince Georges County, Marjorie Mae Burdette of Gaithersburg, and Amy Fry, 17, of Laytonsville.

Latin Get-Together

To believers in free federation, there is encouragement in the talks between four Latin-American countries now going on in Quito, Ecuador. Last May representatives of the four "Great Colombian" nations—Venezuela, Colombia, Panama and Ecuador—framed what was termed the "Quito Charter," establishing an economic and customs union. The current meeting is designed to discuss and implement the charter, and it has attracted considerable interest in Latin America. Incidentally, it is the first concrete outgrowth of the cooperation pledged at the Bogota and Havana conferences.

The movement for economic union between the four "Great Colombian" countries is logical. Not only do the peoples concerned have a common bond of language, but they also are united by a common history and by the similarity of their economies. The compelling reasons for economic unity, however, should not cloud the significance of a step actually to bring it about. As one Ambassador put it, this is the first such movement "which goes beyond the stage of speech making and champagne drinking."

Even though the accent is on gradualism, the program for economic unity is ambitious. The Quito report recommends the establishment of four permanent councils, on customs, production, means of communication and finance. Beyond these it recommends the establishment of a sort of regional bank, a combined airline, a unified system of social insurance to cover workers migrating between the countries, and standardization of patent legislation.

The real meaning of the Quito conference will of course depend on whether the enthusiasm which stems in great part from Ecuador also captures the other delegates, and whether an economic combination in the interest of the four nations can be effected without discriminating against trade with other countries, including the United States. Regardless of the material outcome of the conference, however, the sublimation and integration of strictly national sovereignty in the common good which may be seen in embryo at Quito is a movement of profound interest to the free peoples of the world.

Eccles Vs. Snyder

The sound of teeth gnashing can be heard in the camp of the President's monetary advisers, and it must be embarrassing to the President. The feud, undercover till now, is Marriner Eccles vs. John Snyder. Mr. Eccles, a man of positive opinion, used to be chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. The President did not renew his chairmanship, but asked him to stay on as vice chairman, and Mr. Eccles remained on the board out of a sense of public service. After all, the board is responsible to Congress, not to the President, and Mr. Eccles, who knows his economics, felt his duty to the people was superior to any personal feeling. It is a good thing to have men like Mr. Eccles around.

Since the end of the war Mr. Eccles has been a voice crying out in a wilderness of blundering. He objected vigorously to the premature dropping of controls, and for the last 18 months has been raising a warning finger about the inflation. His faculty of being right and his deep knowledge of central banking make him respected, if not followed, in the halls of Congress. His insistence upon restraints on bank credit would have been enough to make him anathema at the Treasury. For the Treasury has the national debt to look after, and is loathe to back restraints which might make money, and thus its borrowing, dearer. But this interdepartmental trouble acquired a personal edge over Mr. Eccles' crusade against the expansion of banking control through holding companies. It was fanning out from California, and the accumulation of assets in other States by the Giannini interests disturbed him, as the accumulation of assets in industry by undercover monopolists is disturbing those who are like-minded with him.

This is evidently what bothered the authorities. Bad enough for a man to be making a stand against the inflation, worse to see him object to, and even to try to encourage legislation against, banking monopoly. The word went out: Eccles must go! But Mr. Eccles is still here, adding to the mark he has made with Congress, and a gadfly to the do-nothing school which persuaded the President last November not to follow up his own recommendations on bank credit. Now he is coming into his own, though at a time when he feels it is too late to avoid a reckoning for the price splurge.

Security Regulations

The current revelations of Soviet espionage activities indicate, if nothing else, that the Government's security regulations, even during the war, were honored very largely in the breach so far as the civilian agencies of the executive branch were concerned. It is much to be doubted, moreover, that they were observed with any greater fidelity by members and employes of Congress. Despite the establishment of extensive information offices in almost every Federal agency, unauthorized persons very frequently, with the utmost innocence and the best of intentions, talked pretty freely about the work in which they were engaged to reporters, to fellow-employes and, even, on occasion, to unknown persons about whose bona fides they knew nothing whatsoever. Confidences, off-the-record disclosures and frank expressions of personal opinion were indulged in commonly by low and high officials alike.

The reason for this carelessness is rooted in the American character. Members of a free society are generally disposed to take for granted the loyalty of their fellow-citizens; and until lately at least, Americans were pretty well justified in doing so almost indiscriminately. Indeed, this may be reckoned one of the great virtues and benefits of freedom. Spy rings have long seemed to the people of this country artifices of fiction; and subversion, until the Communists introduced their techniques of duplicity and concealment, was a device restricted to countries where open dissent was forbidden. In both world wars, a great deal of effort was expended to make people aware that the enemy had long ears. But it is doubtful that the admonition was ever treated as seriously as it should have been.

Americans tend, moreover, to rebel against restraint of any sort. And to many persons in and out of the Government, security restraints frequently seemed quite fatuous. The special wastebaskets for burning classified material were commonly ridiculed. The press was vastly impatient with what it deemed overclassification of Government documents and with attempts to interpose press relations officers between reporters and responsible officials. Furthermore, the very enthusiasm with which Federal employes threw themselves into their work made them eager to talk to all who would listen about aspects of it they considered non-secret. Nevertheless, in respect of those subjects where secrecy was vital and indisputably necessary, the atomic energy project, for example, it should be noted that security was maintained with the utmost care by everyone concerned.

It is a good deal easier to maintain security for important and trivial matters alike under a totalitarian than under a democratic government. Russian officials, isolated from the public in their walled Kremlin, free from all question and criticism, find it quite easy, no doubt, to refrain from careless comment. But then, it should be recognized, their government suffers from the deadly defect that it is not obliged to justify, to explain, to apologize for what it does; its blunders, in other words, go unchecked. And perhaps this is the inevitable price of perfect security. It is worth asking, at any rate, whether, with all the indubitable risks entailed in the kind of carelessness and even occasional disloyalty of which American officials have been guilty, it is not preferable to preserve between the people and their public servants the facility of communication which alone can keep government genuinely responsible.

Atomic Policy

President Truman's statement in connection with the semiannual report of the Atomic Energy Commission was a reassuring summary of American policy in handling the great discovery of atomic power. The unsettled state of world affairs has not weakened the President's determination to retain control of atomic weapons in his own hands. The pressure of the military to obtain a supply of atomic bombs for emergency use has obviously been resisted. That is a fact of the utmost importance, and we think the President has done well to let the country know in unmistakable terms that he holds himself directly responsible for any decision as to when and where atomic bombs may be used, if they are to be used at all.

There is also an element of reassurance in the President's vague statement that "our position in the field of atomic weapons has been substantially improved." It is a tragic fact that the world is now confronted by rivalry in the perfection of weapons as lethal as the atomic bomb. But earnest and persistent efforts on the part of the United States have not been able to change that fact. The Soviet Union, as Mr. Truman pointed out, has resisted every reasonable approach to an international system for development and control of atomic energy. Its uncooperative attitude has left no alternative to atomic preparedness and secrecy in the development of all aspects of atomic power that are related to its military use.

While the world is waiting for a more auspicious atmosphere in which to resume efforts for international control of atomic energy, a colossal responsibility rests upon this country. The know-how of making atomic weapons must be safeguarded; research must be pressed with all vigor; and control over this unpredictable new power must be properly maintained on a national level. The failure of international control makes it the more important to maintain the right kind of national restraints. The United States has an obligation to all humanity to see that this most destructive of all weapons is not used in a reckless manner and that it shall not for a moment become an instrument of terrorism or oppression. That requires exclusive government ownership of atomic facilities, as the President noted, with the reins of control firmly held in civilian hands.

Seeing Stalin

The smiles that are regularly reported on the countenances of the three Western envoys in Moscow are all that Americans, waiting for news of a detente over Berlin, have to go on. Molotov came back unexpectedly to see the Ambassadors, they told him they wished to wait on Stalin, and Stalin has received them. It has been smiles all the way, and the only construction to be put on the gratification is that the big powers are in the way again to enter a diplomatic phase in their relations on what is called the highest level. The changed attitude on the part of the Western powers toward comprehensive negotiations with Russia is welcome. Three months ago the very idea of negotiations at any level was rejected, three weeks ago the feeling was that, even if there were any discussions, these must be limited to Berlin, and then by deputies.

Whatever is back of the ambassadorial smiles, Soviet Russia and the Western powers are still miles apart in their views on the set-up they desire in Germany. Moscow still wants a highly centralized Reich, a voice in the management of the Ruhr, and a crippling bill for reparations. Do these items remain the price for a peace treaty and the withdrawal of troops from Germany, the prospect of which Moscow held out at the recent meeting of the Cominform as the policy that it wants to pursue? The answer, of course, will not be known till the Foreign Ministers get around a table, and find out.

The necessary preliminary remains that no discussions on the comprehensive issue can take place while the surface blockade is maintained. The way out of the dilemma may be simultaneous concessions, as on currency and on a Western government at Frankfurt. Any concession on a new modus for Berlin as the price of four-power negotiations would be precisely the kind of negotiation under duress against which the Western powers have firmly set their face.

Greek Gas

No confirmation is forthcoming from the State Department on the report by a National Broadcasting Co. correspondent to the effect that the Greek Minister of War, George Stratos, has berated the United States for failure to supply the Greek army with poison gas for use against the guerillas. An official of the aid mission states categorically that no such request has ever been made by Greek authorities, and that no consideration has ever been given by American personnel of the aid mission to the use of poison gas. That is welcome reassurance. A possible source of the story is the speculation carried by Athens newspapers at the time of the visit to Greece of Army Undersecretary Draper and General Wedemeyer late in July.

The incident shows the handicaps facing the liberal forces in Greece in struggling with the guerillas as well as the obscurantists in Athens. The story ought not to be allowed to gain currency, and a forthright public denial by American officials concerned would help set matters right. Poison gas has a particularly ugly connotation in the minds of people the world over, and the intimation that such an indiscriminate weapon was ever being considered would add to the difficulties which are impeding our effort to resuscitate Greece.

Sticks And Stones

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin, the members of the Soviet forces now in Germany and Austria have a bitter prejudice against being called Russians. It appears that in Vienna recently a USSR soldier shot a USA (European command) soldier merely because the man had tactlessly referred to him as a Russki.

Of course it could be argued that a Russian is a Russian no matter what he may call himself, but the subtle distinction between the name of a thing and what it is called should be familiar to every reader of Through the Looking Glass, wherein it was explained in lucid detail to Alice by that eminent semanticist the White Knight. For example, the citizens of Alabama, taking them by and large, are not believers in the monarchical form of government. Now the name for people who do not believe in the monarchical form is Republicans, but for some reason very few Alabamans care to be called that. Similarly, the name for groups of people who hold property in common is Communist, but many who follow this practice—as, for example, the members of Roman Catholic religious orders—do not usually relish that word. Again, from an etymological point of view, it makes little difference whether you give the name "parliamentary" or the name "dictatorial" to the form of government which is conducted mainly by speechmaking, but, of course, it makes a great difference which you call it; just as it makes a big difference whether you call a man a demagogue or a leader of the people.

The White Knight, if we remember, having drawn the distinction between the name of a thing and what it is called, went on to draw a further distinction between what it is called and what it is. Thus the name of a Russian is Russian, but what he is called or wants to be called is Soviet. But what he is may be something else again, and under less public circumstances we would gladly explain it to you in discreet whispers, but perhaps we had better not attempt to do so in the pages of a great family newspaper like this.

Studebaker's Charges

I wouldn't pretend to know much about the Office of Education or the administration of the Federal Security Agency by Mr. Ewing, but Mr. Studebaker's blast leads to these observations:

1. The statement seems a little short on integrity. It was my impression that it is customary for the public speeches of subordinate officials to be passed on by the department.

2. It has been my observation that when officials spend their time making vitriolic speeches against communism they are ordinarily cloaking the poverty of their own contribution to democratic process and in some cases cloaking their own hostility to the extension of democratic opportunity.

3. It seems apparent to me that the recent attacks on Mr. Ewing have had nothing to do with his political connections with the Democratic Party. Rather they have stemmed first from his courageous administrative step away from racial discrimination in hospitals in the District of Columbia and secondly from his resounding warning about the danger to public welfare legislation in the United States if reactionary Republicans and Southern Democrats control the next Administration.

Health Insurance

Since Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly on July 26, has misinterpreted some of my viewpoints, I should like to reply.

He states that I "champion full-coverage compulsory national health insurance." Correct. The phrase "somewhat modified" which "intrigues" Dr. Mattingly refers to changes from the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill of 1948 which appear in S-1320, a bill to provide a "National Health Insurance and Public Program," now before Congress. The purpose and basic features remain; the changes are minor.

I am sorry that Dr. Mattingly interprets anything I wrote as indicating "utter contempt for majority will." Rather, I realize that only if the majority of physicians understand that the proposed national health insurance program is consistent with the highest ideals of the medical profession will the optimum result accrue from its passage.

Dr. Mattingly states that British doctors "admitted that the per capita method of paying doctors would overwork the doctor and cheat the patient." If the doctors should find themselves overworked as a result of dispensing essential medical services to those previously not obtaining those services, the proper solution would be to provide more doctors. Further, the implication in the argument that without health insurance the doctors are not overworked and (hence) patients are not "cheated" is plainly false. If there were not now patients being "cheated" of medical care, there would be no health insurance problem.

Dr. Mattingly completely misrepresents my position when he suggests that I underlook "the tactical strategy of diverting attention from the propaganda activities of Dr. Ernst P. Boas of New York." I should like nothing better than for Dr. Boas to present the case for national health insurance to every medical society in the land, with Dr. Mattingly as co-speaker.

A good case needs only the opportunity for a full hearing before those earnestly desiring to know the truth and to act accordingly. The editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association has refused to permit in its letter columnns the expression of the views of Dr. Boas and other outstanding physicians. Is this "tactical strategy?" Perhaps it is only a case of strategic tactics.

Teachers' Pay

Permit me to borrow an idea from Jonathan Swift, in making "A Modest Proposal." It has occurred to me that whereas Mr. Dirksen had introduced a bill to grant District classified employes, police, and firemen a $330 increase and teachers a $200 increase, and whereas the funds are not available, that the following would be an excellent idea. Since the teachers are a group which is not affected by the high cost of living, and since the average teacher is quite wealthy, why not deduct $330, and more if necessary, from the salaries of teachers, to offset the expense of salary increases? In this way the teacher will have found another way of contributing to society's well-being.

TEACHER'S WIFE.

Exit The Theater

Sad words are being said about the death of the National Theater as a legitimate theater. They are indeed appropriate from one point of view. From another, every thinking and truly democratic citizen must be glad that through the efforts of some, at least, of Washington's citizens and also through a sense of justice on the part of actors themselves, discrimination in this old and famous playhouse is no longer possible as it has been in the past.

In the same way the citizens of Washington owe their support to those groups now working to open a nondiseriminatory center for theater arts in this city. Whether or not the Belasco Theater is the most practical place to try to bring this about, I am not able to say, but all of us should awaken to the need of help of all toward this end.

One must be continually puzzled, and amused, by the satisfactory use of the Federal auditoriums by mixed groups, year after year, and the unwillingness of the District to make available its beautiful school auditoriums for after-hour entertainment. I believe that the response of Washington citizenry would more than justify a decision to open them and at the same time mean a great step forward in the breaking down of the present unreasonable prejudice.

Memos To Congress

The cost of food today is the highest in our history. Most of other necessities are at record-breaking levels. There are other ills that should demand prompt attention by our governing bodies, but it seems that no one denies there is none more important than the present excessive cost of living.

It does not appear useful to discuss who may be to blame for such serious maladies. It must be made clear at this time that a party now in power which fails at once to undertake in good faith to find some relief and if possible some practical remedy for the high cost of living cannot escape the blame.

If the leader of the Senate be a great statesman, here is a chance to prove his qualifications in the next presidential campaign. It appears beyond dispute that as Mr. David Lawrence has stated in one of his recent comments, "if the whole truth were revealed about the high cost of living, it would be discovered that money and materials going to aid Europe are basically responsible for today's inflation." Both the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Michigan helped to bring about that basic condition and must share in the responsibility.

We are giving billions of dollars to enable the British and the Europeans to purchase consumer goods in the United States and little or nothing to enable us in the United States to increase the production of such commodities. Furthermore, our taxpayers are forced to subsidize beyond reason vital farm products which materially increase the cost of food to every American. While it is true wages also are at highest levels, that may be solely due to the high cost of living.

In view of our recent foreign policies promoted so conspicuously by the senior Senator from Michigan with the support of the senior Senator from Ohio, it is not easy to accept an alibi for the Republican Party, much less to absolve them from responsibility for much of the evil consequences we now endure.

The prestige of the Eightieth Congress, already impaired by its poor record of performance, will sink to a low ebb if the special session adjourns without passing legislation designed to deal with the vital issues of the day.

By bottling up many vital bills in that legislative morgue—the House Rules Committee—and by their abject subservience to real estate and other lobbyists, the leaders of the House have betrayed the public welfare. That autocratic triumvirate—the Speaker, the Majority Leader and the Chairman of Rules—have shown more concern for politicking and the pressure boys than for the public interest.

The symbol GOP which once stood for Grand Old Party now seems to stand for Grand Old Paunches, Gosh Offul Politics and Grossly Outrageous Profits.

This Congress which passed certain rather drastic legislation against strikes is itself threatening to go on strike against the American people, who elected them to office, who pay their salaries, and who would stand to suffer the serious consequences of their walkout.

You'd think the Republicans would at least pass the margarine bill and get credit for occasionally having a stray thought for the consumer and housewife. But no, somebody remembers that way back yonder the now broken-backed dairy bloc was powerful. So the word is passed, "Go easy boys. We might make somebody out in Nebraska or Iowa mad." As if anything the GOP could do would lose the Midwest. But things they don't do can and will lose them votes in the cities where the consumers are getting madder and madder.

Segregation Of Sexes

By Malvina Lindsay

Two Worlds

ANOTHER segregation issue is obtruding itself into the much agitated field of human exclusiveness. Out of the recent centennial celebration of the women's rights movement has come much discussion of why American men and women follow segregation in so much of their social and organizational life.

Some social prophets are predicting that this system is on the way out, that women will soon be walking in the front doors—not the alley entrances—of men's clubs, that men will be serving on the boards of the great national women's organizations, and that even the "hen party" will become an anachronism.

These predictions aren't based so much on the growing expansiveness of men's and women's (particularly men's) souls as on the changing economic and social scene. They are also based on the growing realization that projects generally succeed best if the masculine-feminine balance is brought to their direction. Two of the most successful publishing ventures in the country today attest to this.

MERGER OF men's and women's civic groups to work for new goals of human betterment is forecast by Dr. M. Eunice Hilton, dean of women at Syracuse University. She believes that the great national women's groups have accomplished many of their goals, made a lasting contribution to American life, and that now they should join with men in such objectives as ending discrimination and injustice, especially through education. She even suggests that such organizations as the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations take steps in their board membership toward becoming "co-ed" groups.

Men's and women's organized groups will, of course, continue as such for a long time to come. But there is definitely a trend away from the tight sex segregation that has characterized them. More and more men's professional and civic organizations are opening their membership to women. The younger political groups do not as a rule have their "ladies" divisions. New organizations for new goals, which are springing up on every hand, follow the "co-ed" system naturally.

The increasing tendency of married women to work outside the home leaves many women the same leisure hours as men, and should encourage the mixed club and the mixed social gathering. Yet in the rapidly increasing older group of the population there will always be many women who have the daytime leisure to give to public affairs. These women will be the backbone of organized feminine groups in the future. Yet it is possible, even likely, that their membership will include men with leisure.

THIS WOULD seem fair enough since down the years always a few brave men unhandicapped by any social inferiority sense have given much aid and comfort (also cash) to women in their struggles for rights and opportunities. A little group of men intellectuals and liberals attended the Seneca Falls meeting of 1848 at which the women's rights movement was launched, and one of them presided. Later there were men who felt personally secure enough to give their backing to woman's suffrage activities, and even to march in parades.

However, among American men generally there has been a strong hangover of the Puritan feeling that put men and women on opposite sides of the meeting house. Men's professional, civic and humanitarian groups have tightly resisted participation by women. And even when women were admitted to such groups they were kept on the back seats so far as recognition was concerned.

This has been one of the main reasons for the development in the United States of the great woman's world of club and social life, at which foreign visitors here have often marveled. Through their own groups women have been able to develop their talents and initiative instead of sitting on the sidelines, or doing the dishwashing and secretarial work, which would have been their fate in "mixed" groups. Now as the old sex segregation shows signs of yielding it is evident that women will insist on working with men, not by sufferance but because of what they can contribute.

"Art's Reward"

Because words are more often and more easily written in criticism than in praise, we have, from time to time, taken issue with the wording or presentation of material dealing with the arts in local papers.

At this moment we offer our commendation upon your July 15 editorial, "Art's Reward," dealing with the disposition of paintings purchased by the State Department. Humor has its place, but it is often terribly tiresome to have such matters treated facetiously even though they may have more reader appeal.

We bid on 40 pictures, hoping to get one or two good ones (they were not all good), but our priority was not high enough. You treat the matter fairly and indicate that specialists in a field are more likely to have valid opinions upon their own subject than the uninitiated, whether in politics or the fine arts.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Toward A Fresh Approach

LIPPMANN

THE CONFERENCE which took place last Monday evening in the Kremlin restored, at least temporarily, the diplomatic intercourse which has for all practical purposes been suspended for something like two years. For the debates in the Council of Foreign Ministers and at the United Nations have, as a British writer put it recently, been nothing but public disagreements publicly arrived at. The net effect of these debates has been to make the problems dealt with insoluble. For after the governments had proclaimed their positions, they could not modify them.

The problems which divide the world will remain insoluble if, as diplomatic intercourse is resumed, the same old cracked phonograph records are played over again. The question, therefore, is whether the four powers are willing to make a fresh approach to the problem of a European settlement.

THOUGH it would be expecting much too much to suppose that they can be ready to make a fresh approach, it is not altogether unreasonable to hope that the experience of the past two years may have shown that the old lines of policy lead only to deadlock and frustration. Surely it is clear that the Yalta-Potsdam conception of a continuing collaboration in the direction of Germany and eastern Europe is unworkable.

But surely it is becoming equally clear that the division of Europe and Germany is also unworkable. For neither the Soviets nor the Western Powers have been able to achieve a stable organization in the two halves of Europe. Both have tried. There is no prospect that either will succeed.

WHEN Moscow forbade eastern Europe to participate in the Marshall Plan, it made a commitment which it is manifestly unable to carry out. The Soviet Union is unable to furnish the eastern countries with the capital equipment and manufactured goods which their programs of reconstruction call for. Eastern Europe is buying much more from the West than it is able to sell—nearly twice as much—and this deficit cannot be met unless eastern Europe is assisted by credits and trade agreements from the West. The eastern countries do not conceal their desire to deal with the West: The alternative is a failure to raise their extremely low standard of life and the definite postponement of their plans for reconstruction and development.

At the same time the military position of the Soviet Union in eastern Europe is not improving: The Tito rebellion, the conditions in Czechoslovakia, in Poland, in Hungary and in Finland do not permit the Soviet general staff to rely upon the satellite armies. The fact that they have to enforce their control by extreme measures is a certain sign that they could not, in case of war, count upon the undivided loyalty of their allies.

BUT THE Western Powers have also been unable to organize their part of Europe. The recovery program, the Western Union, and the London agreements for a German state, are all of them far from achieving what was promised and expected of them.

Commenting on this, Life Magazine said the other day that "western Europe, having produced the idea of union, has not produced the energy and leadership required to make it a reality." The editorial says with much eloquence that "mediocre leaders" have not been compelled to act because the people are suffering from "a fatigue of the mind and soul."

No doubt that is true. But may it not also be true that the leaders and the people are listless and dispirited because they are trying to do a thing which cannot be done, namely to unite a mere fragment of a continent which is economically and politically indivisible? So it seems to me. We are finding it impossible to "integrate" western Europe because western Europe is not, and never has been, and probably can never become, a self-sufficient economic region.

And we cannot unite it politically because we do not know what to do with western Germany. For the western German state, if unarmed, cannot enter the Western Union; if it is rearmed, it will be the master of the Western Union, and able to make its own independent deal with Russia and the East.

IF WE have learned that we cannot collaborate in the management of Europe and that we cannot divide Europe and manage the separate parts, does it not follow that we must negotiate on a radically different basis? What can that new basis be except that our objective is no longer to govern Europe from Moscow, Washington, and London but to work out the conditions under which the attempt of the non-European powers to govern can safely be liquidated?

If we cannot collaborate, if we cannot divide Europe and make either half viable, then in the next phase we shall have to see whether we can agree to a gradual and regulated withdrawal which restores to the European nations the sovereignty of Europe.

THIS cannot be done quickly, nor should it be proposed, except as a grand objective, until the measures have been thoroughly prepared and discussed at length in confidential diplomatic intercourse. But if by a modus vivendi in Berlin the tension can be relaxed, we shall then do well to make haste slowly in the ensuing negotiations.

Schoeppel, McGill Will Vie For Capper's Seat in Senate

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 4 (AP).—Republican Andrew F. Schoeppel and Democrat George McGill will vie in the November general election for the United States Senate seat of Kansas' veteran Arthur Capper.

Both won their party's nominations in yesterday's primary election. Capper, dean of the Senate, is retiring after nearly 30 years.

Schoeppel, a former Governor, easily won the Republican nomination over Harold Malone, a Wichita lawyer. McGill, a former United States Senator, defeated E. K. Dean, St. Marys farm leader, in the Democratic race.

Returns from 2173 of the State's 2772 precincts gave Schoeppel 115,041 votes to 33,887 for Malone. McGill had 33,708 votes to 15,000 for Dean in 2073 precincts.

In the GOP gubernatorial race, Gov. Frank Carlson won renomination by more than 100,000 votes over former Congressman W. P. Lambertson, who campagined as a dry, and James A. McClain who made the race on a "wet" platform. Kansas, a dry State, will vote on repeal of its prohibition amendment in November.

Randolph Carpenter of Marion led Ewell Stewart of Topeka in returns from 2051 precincts in the Democratic gubernatorial race. Carpenter had 26,275 votes and Stewart 18,838.

In the Republican congressional races all incumbents were ahead. The closest race was in the Third District where Representative Herbert A. Meyer held a 2000-vote margin over Thomas D. Winter, a former Congressman. Meyer had 14,540 votes to 12,534 for Winter in 301 of the 316 precincts.

The other incumbents were well ahead of their opposition. They include Albert M. Cole, First District; Errett P. Scrivner, Second District; Ed H. Rees, Fourth District, and Wint Smith, Sixth District. In the Fifth District, Representative Hope had no opposition.

Tennessee Vote Today to Test Crump Power

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 4 (AP).—Tennessee voters will choose Democratic and Republican nominees for United States Senator and Governor tomorrow.

Key figure in the Democratic primary race is E. H. Crump of Memphis, whose Shelby County machine is facing a serious challenge for the first time in 30 years.

Crump is backing John A. Mitchell, a middle Tennessee circuit judge, for the Senate and Gov. Jim McCord for a third term.

Thompson, Smith Win In Missouri

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (AP).—Missouri's November campaign for governor pits State Auditor Forrest Smith against Murray E. Thompson, speaker of the State House of Representatives.

Smith

Smith piled up a lopsided majority in yesterday's Democratic primary. Thompson's margin neared 40,000 in the final tabulating for Republicans.

In 4046 of 4611 precincts, Thompson had 156,476 to 119,539 for Manvel H. (Cap) Davis of Kansas City, his nearest rival.

In 4264 precincts Smith's total reached 214,934. Dan M. Nee, former United States tax collector, was far behind in second with 74,872.

A candidate supported by James M. Pendergast of Kansas City, head of President Truman's political club, pulled a surprise in the fourth congressional district where the President lives.

Leonard Irving, president of an AFL laborers' union, defeated the preelection favorite, State Senator Floyd R. Gibson of Independence, for the Democratic nomination by 189 votes with unofficial returns complete.

Coalition Beats Pendergast

The President did not disclose how he voted but friends said he favored Rufus Burruss, Independence lawyer, who ran fourth. Incumbent C. Jasper Bell did not run.

In the north Kansas City First Ward where Pendergast power has been concentrated, a coalition headed by Charles Binaggio beat Pendergast forces in a local test for county assessor.

But Pendergast, political heir of the late T. J. (Boss Tom), won another county battle. His candidate ousted the Democratic county chairman, Harry A. Morris, in a Democratic committeeman fight. The new committeeman is Ralph M. Russell, who plans to run for county chairman.

In another Democratic district—the Tenth of southeastern Missouri—Joseph Hunter Allen, 49, New Madrid lawyer and plantation owner—appeared to be the winner.

With only 26 precincts unreported, he hung onto a lead of almost 2000 votes over former State Senator Paul C. Jones, his closest rival.

The Tenth became a battleground after the death of Representative Orville Zimmerman last spring.

The Seventh District of southwestern Missouri, a traditionally Republican area, had a heated campaign but Representative Dewey Short of Galena won renomination to a ninth term over Quentin Haden of Ava.

Short is in line for chairmanship of the House Armed Services Committee if Congress remains Republican in November.

Other Missouri incumbent Congressmen had no trouble winning renomination.

Organization Democrats in Va. Easily Win Primary Contests

Winning with ease in all primary contests Tuesday, Virginia's organization Democrats yesterday turned their attention to Republican opposition in the November general elections.

Returns from the primary, marked by an apathetic campaign and capped by an unusually light vote, showed the defeated anti-organization candidate for Senator, James P. Hart, jr., of Roanoke, with a comparatively weak showing.

Hart, who based his campaign on opposition to the "Byrd machine," polled 31,523 votes against 72,694 for incumbent Senator A. Willis Robertson, in unofficial returns from 1301 of the State's 1755 precincts.

This was a far smaller anti-organization vote than that given Martin A. Hutchinson in his campaign against Senator Harry F. Byrd in the 1946 primary.

Like Robertson, three Democratic organization candidates for the House also won easy victories: Representative J. Vaughan Gary in the Third District, Clarence G. Brown in the Sixth District, and Representative W. Howard Smith in the Eighth District.

Although he won by more than a 2-to-1 margin in the Eighth District, with an unofficial count of 9683 votes to 4213 for Arthur F. Souther, Arlington attorney, in returns from 179 of the district's 234 precincts Smith suffered a personal rebuff in his home town of Alexandria.

There he barely nosed out Souther, 994 to 970, which anti-organization leaders in Alexandria yesterday termed a significant new dip in Smith's appeal, pointing out that Smith was first checked in the 1946 primary when he ran behind Hutchinson in total Alexandria votes. Against his three opponents that year, Smith polled 1928 votes to their combined total of 1764.

But Smith supporters yesterday were quick to note that Smith did not conduct an active campaign in this primary, in which there were less than 2000 Alexandria votes cast for Democratic candidates.

In the Eighth District Republican primary, first such primary ever held in Virginia, Tyrrell Krum of Vienna, veterans affairs editor of the Washington Times-Herald, won by a 2-to-1 margin over Charles O. Pratt, Arlington attorney, with 2184 votes to 1037 on unofficial tabulations.

Throughout the Eighth District, the proportion of the Democratic vote to the Republican vote was about 4 to 1. In Alexandria, only 319 Republican votes were cast, unofficial returns showed.

Despite this, GOP leaders throughout the State are girding for a strong battle in November, when Robert H. Woods, State Republican chairman and State Convention nominee for the Senate, will lead the GOP State ticket.

Republicans, who have not carried the State since 1928, when Virginia went Republican for Hoover, have scheduled a full campaign for this fall, encouraged by the fact that Dewey trailed Roosevelt by less than 100,000 in the State four years ago.

In the only local contest in nearby Virginia, Alfred Frisbie, successful candidate in a three-cornered race for Democratic nominee for the Arlington county board, will face two or more opponents in the general election.

Frisbie, according to unofficial returns, polled 2349 votes, against 1182 for Harold L. Schilz and 811 for William C. Nemeth.

I. Lee Potter, Arlington builder, has already announced his candidacy for this post, as has Francis J. Clair, a free-lance writer, who attempted to file for the primary but was refused indorsement by the County GOP committee. Also likely to announce for the board race is H. Herbert Howe, secretary of the Better Government League.

Revers Warns of 'Bloodshed'

By The Associated Press

Representative Rivers (D., S. C.) told the House yesterday "there will be bloodshed" unless Federal Judge Waties Waring of South Carolina is removed.

Representative Dorn (D., S. C.) has introduced a resolution asking Congress to investigate "the conduct in office" of Waring, Federal district judge for eastern South Carolina.

Rivers said in addressing the House:

"I am not complaining about his (Waring's) decision permitting Negroes to vote. I think anybody, whether he is a lawyer or not, could see that the Federal courts were going to permit the Negroes to vote in South Carolina primaries. The Awkright case was the signal for this. Personally I have felt for many years that we have had thousands of qualified Negroes in South Carolina who should be permitted to vote in our primaries.

"However, I didn't feel then and I don't feel now that illiterates, white or black, should be permitted to vote and I have on many occasions advocated an educational requirement for the right to vote. . . . Everybody knows Negroes have always voted in general elections in South Carolina and everywhere else in the Nation.

"In interpretation of what a judge considered to be law, whether he is right or wrong, he does not have to go through a metamorphis and become a monster. The law should be interpreted with dignity. The law should be interpreted so that people will have a respect for law. Judge Waring's miserable conduct in issuing orders has been nothing short of star chamber procedure.

"But his clumsy handling of a delicate situation has hurt the cause of the Negro in South Carolina. This is unfortunate and I trust will not long obtain.

"Unless he is removed, there will be bloodshed.

"I prophesy bloodshed because he is now in the process of exacting a pound of flesh from the white people of South Carolina, because, through his own actions, he has been ostracized from their society.

"I charge that Waring's decisions are so political he is hopeful for a promotion to the Circuit Court of Appeals if by some curious twist, Light Horse Harry Truman should slip into the White House for another term."

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday saw the following White House callers:

11—Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.).

11:30—John Mussio, special representative of the President of Korea.

Blandings Humor Defies Tinkering

By Richard L. Coe

"MR. BLANDINGS BUILDS HIS DREAM HOUSE," at Keith's, is, naturally, a pretty good comedy. With Cary Grant, Myrna Loy and Melvyn Douglas giving their slick wit to Eric Hodgins' amusing adventure, this timely comedy couldn't help provoking those laughs we all need.

That this primarily custom-built setup has been treated to the machine-line approach of Hollywood keeps it, however, from being the sharp, exceptional comedy it might have been. It's rather striking that the very ingredients Hollywood has used to pad out the adventure are the very spots where one becomes restless. The fact remains, of course, that this is one of those pictures almost everyone will want to see, will reasonably enjoy and, as a result, the entire project will be justified as it is.

Anyone who can read must by now know about the trials of Mr. Blandings. His frustration at the rabbit-hutch existence of city life; his trek with his wife to the commutable countryside of Connecticut; their infatuation with an old house; their decision to tear it down and start from level ground; their bumbling additions to their architect's drawings; their monosyllabic water-driller; their dismay at building terms and how easy it is to say the wrong thing; their plunge into the abyss of mortgages, short loans and personal notes, all are part of the Blandings saga, a saga that found reflections in the lives of all of us who've ever had anything to do with the building-a-house nightmare.

"MR. BLANDINGS BUILDS HIS DREAM HOUSE," RKO production released through Selznick, produced by Norman Panama and Melvin Frank, writers of the screen play from the novel by Eric Hodgins. Photographed by James Wong Howe. Directed by H. C. Potter. At RKO-Keith's.

All on $15,000 a Year

Presumably to make the Blandings more human, their plight more plausible, the green god of jealousy has been conjured up in Blandings' mind to imagine a romance between his wife and their lawyer, a friend of long standing. While this doesn't get overly in the way, it's there to show that the Selznick people weren't too confident i. their purely satiric gear. The familiar suggestion of Love had to be added to whet the masses' interest; wet would be more like it. The effect has been to make the Blandings less like you and me, more like the puppets of the screen.

In exchange for this taking away of simplicity which would have made the film more of a satire, less of a burlesque, we are given Grant, Miss Loy and Douglas, who are always welcome. When Grant attempts to shave at a mirror while Miss Loy is brushing her teeth, they are far more amusing than when the film is setting its teeth on progressive education and broadly mocking the Blandings' daughters. That the approach of simplicity can succeed in picturing everyday habits is illustrated in the Dupont's amusing "Antoine and Antoinette."

That the whole approach is larger than life is pointed up in the home the Blandings, living on $15,000 a year, finally build and furnish. According to Selznick's realization of the Blandings dream, poor Cary would have to labor at $15,000 a year well into his 100th summer to remove half their debts.

True, it's only an elaboration of the original idea and thanks to its cast it's an ingratiating comedy, but what a sharp, nifty picture it might have made had Hollywood less grandiose ideas of how we all live, less romantic notions of how people behave.

Olney's 'Gemma' Is Enough

Bergner Bewitches Audience Despite Vehicle That Creaks

SOME IDEA of the hold Elisabeth Bergner experts on her acolytes was illustrated at her opening performance in Olney's "Escape Me Never." Not even a rainy evening deterred an overflow house and its enthusiasm for the magnetic star approximated the reception accorded Helen Hayes at the start of the season.

For Miss Bergner is a bewitching, magnetic player, and of all her successes in the English-speaking stage no role allows her such scope as Gemma Jones, the fey gypsy girl who sticks to her worthless man through thin and thinner. This character, which Margaret Kennedy transposed from her book to the stage, was Miss Bergner's first part in the language after a German language career which made her one of the most acclaimed of Europe's stars. She first played Gemma in 1933 and two years later it introduced her to New York.

And what she still does with Gemma is something no one else can ever approach. From the moment she darts on the stage, dressed as a schoolgirl so she can snitch food for her baby and her lover, the evening is all Bergner's. Gemma's gamin attitude toward life, her pathetic despair at the death of her baby, her innately logical affection for the egocentric musician she finally marries are brilliantly pieced together by one of the most persuasive stage personalities of our time.

And while one watches this sorceress at work, one feels helplessly sad. For "Escape Me Never" is no longer a good play, if indeed it ever was one. Too much has happened since, in theater and in life, to be persuaded by its obviously manipulated plot. The supporting characters are at best contrived, and the way most of them are being acted this week makes them sillier yet. The Act I curtain, for instance comes down as a British baronet father sighs "Lordy, lordy, lordy," in sheer "Uncle Tom" accent.

But while Bergner is on stage, which is a good deal of the time, you forget her vehicle and her companions, who are little more than feeds for the star's situations. The infinite detail, the mixture of feminine intuition and experienced skill make Miss Bergner's Gemma a portrait that's as unforgettable as it is fascinating to watch.

Many of the supporting players are touring the better barns this summer with the star (Next week: The Cape Playhouse), and include Philip Huston, Robert Wark and Dorothy Steele. Some are from companies you may have seen before at Olney: Viola Roache and Grant Gordon. Several are resident Washingtonians who've had previous stage experience, including WTOP's Hazel Markel and Lois Alexander, whom you used to see at the old Roadside.

This week's run, which ends with two performances Sunday, is adding a Saturday matinee, a custom to prevail through the end of the Olney season.

World Bank Gets 'Tax Free' Ruling On Bond Interest

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development yesterday announced that interest on its bonds paid to foreign corporations doing business in this country is exempt from Federal tax.

The ruling was made by the Treasury Department, the Bank said.

The exemption does not apply, however, to interest paid to a foreign insurance company and attributable to the insurance business done in the United States.

The Treasury previously had ruled that interest paid to nonresident aliens, or to foreign corporations not doing business in this country, is not subject to the Federal income tax.

Dr. B. R. East Named Chief VA Dentist

Dr. Bion R. East, Columbia University professor of dentistry and executive officer of the university's dentistry department, has been named chief of Veterans Administration dental service.

Dr. East, whose appointment was announced by Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, VA's chief medical director, will take up his new post September 7. He succeeds Dr. E. M. Kennedy, who has been acting head of the dental service since the death of Dr. M. M. Fowler, October 27, 1947.

Gen. Cox Inspects National Guard Camp; Materiel Shortage Report Still Under Study

The report on initial material shortages among District National Guard units training at Camp Pendleton, Va., yesterday was reported still "under study" by the Army Department.

Compiled by Col. Merle Thompson of the general staff, the report was submitted to Maj. Gen. Harold Bull, chief of the division of organization and training two days ago.

Yesterday Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding officer of the District Guard, whose staff had been under fire from Col. Charles M. Myers, training officer at the camp, over what Myers had termed an "utter failure of supply" made an inspection tour of the camp.

The General inspected troops, equipment and sleeping quarters and expressed himself as pleased with the state of training and satisfied with the living conditions generally.

The troops' noon meal of Swiss steak, fresh vegetables, ice cream and lemonade looked "so good," the General remarked, that he sat down in the 260th Gun Bn., messhall and demolished a trayful.

Later the General, accompanied by Colonel Myers and Col. Leroy S. Mann, commander of the encampment, viewed ack-ack firing with toy balloons as targets.

General Cox will visit Dover, Del., Sunday where members of the Air National Guard are in training. Special ceremonies are planned.

Leahy Announces

15 Boards Will Handle Draft Here

District Selective Service Director William E. Leahy announced last night that Washington will have 15 boards to conduct the new draft of 19-to-25-year-olds.

The decision was made at a meeting last night of the board of directors of the Selective Service Association, an organization of local World War II draft officials. Leahy, who directed the last draft, is its president.

Also decided at the closed meeting, Leahy said, were the names of those who will be nominated to head the draft boards. The list will be submitted to the Commissioners Monday for transmission to the White House, where the appointments are made.

Leahy said it is hoped that all 15 boards can be housed under one roof. As in the last draft, school buildings and other convenient locations will be used for registration, which will run from August 30 to September 18.

The last draft required 25 boards. Leahy said the greater number of registration days this time presents new problems in numbers of personnel needed.

Other details of registration, classification and draft board personnel are still being worked out, Leahy said.

Employment Rights Of Active Reservists

Armed forces reservists who went on active duty after last June 24, start of the new Selective Service Act, are eligible for full reemployment rights along with all draftees, the Labor Department said yesterday.

Robert K. Salyers, head of Labor's bureau of veterans' reemployment rights, pointed out that the draft act extends reemployment rights to all persons who enter active duty "in response to an order or call." He said reservists must also apply for reinstatement in their work within 90 days after release.

Veteran Units' Auxiliaries Unite Effort

Formation of a Council of Veterans Auxiliaries here to "unite and work for our common goals" was announced yesterday by Mrs. Ruth Petsos, temporary co-chairman.

Mrs. Petsos, national hospital chairman for the American veterans of World War II Auxiliary (AMVETS), said members will work to:

1. Promote good will and friendship among veterans auxiliaries.
2. Discuss and exchange ideas and problems.
3. Unite "our strength for the benefit of our country, our community and our veterans."

The council, now drafting its constitution and bylaws, elected as its temporary chairman Mrs. Martha Reynolds of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary. Other officers include Mrs. Esther Hoffman of the Jewish War Veterans, temporary treasurer; Mrs. Alma M. Dube of the Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary, temporary secretary; and Mrs. Lillian Pennell of the Army and Navy Union Auxiliary, historian.

Among auxiliaries represented in the council so far are the Navy Mothers, Gold Star Wives, Gold Star Mothers, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Military Order of the Purple Heart. The next meeting will be August 25.

County Chest Apportionment Is Announced

Apportionment of Prince Georges County Chest funds this year among county agencies was reported yesterday by Edgar F. Czarra, Chest president.

Czarra said $108,823 was contributed by county residents during the drive last December and an additional $19,776 was received from the Greater Washington Chest Federation.

Funds were distributed as follows: Hospitalization, $35,945; Catholic Charities, $21,040; Special Service League, $19,500; Girl Scouts, $13,212; Boy Scouts, $11,815; YMCA, $11,707; Chest and Planning Council administration, $10,292; Camp Fire Girls, $3,334, and emergency reserve, $1754.

Walter V. Hurley of 4322 Farragut st., Hyattsville, chairman of the residential committee, said he will announce names of eight area chairmen later this week.

Clark to Get Legion Award For Service

Attorney General Tom Clark will be honored by the District Department, American Legion, at the opening of its thirtieth annual convention tonight at 8 o'clock in Hotel Statler.

The Attorney General and several others, including Harold Hegstrom, head of the National Training School for Boys, will receive a certificate of distinguished service.

Owen C. Holleran, local department commander, will welcome the 1200 persons expected and Rear Admiral Edwin C. Ewen, USN, chief of Navy public relations, will make the principal address.

Interior Secretary J. A. Krug is scheduled to present a stand of colors to members of the Interior Department post.

Friday night the principal speaker will be James F. O'Neil, national Legion commander.

Legion Boys Warned of 'Red Swindle'

Karl Baarslag, research specialist for the Legion's National American Commission, told some 90 boys at American University:

"It is a duty of citizenship for you boys to protect yourselves against swindlers, and Communists are a new type of swindler. They are after your country and your liberty."

He charged that the old American Youth for Democracy is now "fading into" the Young Progressives of America. "There are the same faces, the same game but new suckers," he declared.

Later, delegates to the third annual forum visited the Senate and inspected the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Today, following an early morning visit to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, graduation exercises will be held at 11 a. m. in Hurst Hall. James F. O'Neil, national commander of the Legion, will preside.

At 2:50 p. m. the boys are scheduled to visit the White House and President Truman is due to receive them at 3:30 p. m. After that the forum adjourns.

Army Mules May Lose Their 'Bray'

By the United Press

The Army medics have a new hush-hush project under way, it was disclosed yesterday.

They are going to take the bray out of Army mules.

Army veterinarians observe a strong silence when questioned about the project. But other offices said an exhaustive staff study has been made and orders will go out soon to "debray" mules before they are sent overseas.

It seems that the Army horse medics are worried about possible objections from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The SPCA kicked up a furore over the "debarking" of dogs in New York City in recent years and had the practice abolished as inhumane.

But Army officers say they have good reasons for wanting to take the bray out of mules. They said braying can often reveal the presence of United States soldiers to the enemy.

Furthermore, the officers said, the operation is painless. The mule would get his voice back later, when he wouldn't endanger the lives of his masters and brother mules. The whole job could be accomplished by a simple injection.

A few old mule skinners have protested against the "de-braying." They said the braying of a mule can be very useful at times.

Taking Pictures

Move Off Direct-Light Line for Fine Effects

By Ollie Atkins

From the early days of the box camera, picture takers have made it a rule to work with their backs to the sun. The rule persists today with many snapshooters who do not feel well enough informed about photographic lighting to change from this sure but monotonous lighting.

Do your snapshots have eyes blacked out with underexposed shadow areas? Do long nose and chin shadows ruin your portraits? Then move away from this direct lighting line and make your subject turn from straight sunlight and you'll find summertime sun will brilliantly side-light your pictures. The eyes will be more natural too, for it is rare to find a person who can stare into direct sunlight without squinting.

With the harsh summer sun you may find the lighting contrast between the highlights and shadows is too great even for modern films to compensate for. Notice this before you click and move to areas which reflect light into the shadows such as near concrete walks and walls, light colored buildings will also do the trick. A newspaper held three feet from the shadow area will throw sufficient light to build up shadows. The morning and evening sun is not nearly as contrasty as the high-noon period and will allow you to work without artificial means.

On your exposures involving bright sun and shadow be very accurate. Use your meter to get readings of both brightly and dimly illuminated areas and split your exposure between them with any favor of additional exposure favoring the shadows.

Using natural light in the late afternoon, Oscar Seidenberg, 3730 9th st. nw., was able to get this pleasant picture with an inexpensive folding camera. You too can make pictures like this with simple cameras. Do not work too close to the subject, set the camera on a steady table and exposure with fast film will vary around a twenty-fifth to a tenth of a second with average lens stop about F/8 or F/11.

THE National Photographic Society announces a camera stroll this coming Sunday at 2 p. m. which will include interior at the Pan American Building, the Aztec Gardens and waterlilies in Rawlins Park. Meet at 17th st. and Constitution ave.

A further report on my new Frigidaire dehumidifier—The first night it drained three quarts of water out of my darkroom which is in a basement and is 21 by 12 by 8 feet in size. The less moisture in the air, of course, the less the machine will drop into the bucket. Over a normal day's operation I estimate it will drain three to four quarts of water from the air in my darkroom. The machine is made to operate in areas up to 8000 cubic feet. I am now in the process of oiling up all my rusted machinery and cleaning mold from bellows and leather camera cases hoping at long last this problem of damp darkrooms has ended.

The first double frame 35-mm. camera with a fully automatic film transport and shutter wind, permitting either single exposures or bursts up to 15 frames in rapid sequence is the Foton, a 35-mm. still camera developed by Bell & Howell. Release is scheduled late this year.

The Cine-Kodak Special Camera — Kodak's top-quality 16-mm. movie maker—now features a new type lens turret and improved reflex, eye-level and peepsight viewfinders. One of the best movie machines available this camera is also priced high—$860 plus tax.

Collier's Magazine is seeking good color pictures suitable for cover pictures. They want photographic slices of American life—of young people in striking story-telling situations against natural realistic backgrounds. Young men and women, children, animals and pets are high on the preferred list. Transparencies smaller than 2¼ by 2¼ will not be acceptable.

Nine major airlines have rescinded their ban on the shipment of flashbulbs by air, following extensive research by Government engineers, manufacturers and the airlines themselves.

There was found to be no validity to the charge that bulbs are apt to ignite prematurely due to radar or other high frequency radiation. Shipment of bulbs henceforth will be accepted when in original cartons and properly identified. American Eastern, Northeast, United, Western, Mid-Continent, Monarch, TWA and Pan-American are among those who have already lifted the ban.

An excellent selection of pictorial photographs from the Metropolitan Camera Club Council in New York City is on display until August 31 in the National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution.

Smithsonian Expert Predicts Proposed National Air Museum Will Be World's Finest

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Washington some day will have the finest and most complete air museum in the world—Congress willing.

The proposed National Air Museum, under present plans, would be erected on an as yet undesignated Washington site. It would be large enough to accommodate 200 planes, ranging from pioneer one-seaters to such air giants as the famous Enola Gay, the B-29 which dropped the first atom bomb on Hiroshima.

Detailed dreams of its planners were revealed here yesterday by Paul Garber, curator of the air museum of Smithsonian Institution since 1920.

The proposed museum, said Garber, would accommodate the 75 new historic planes on exhibit at Smithsonian as well as 170 others the museum expects to acquire from the Army, Navy and civilian owners.

Appropriation Factor

Throughout his talking, Garber stressed the congressional factor. But, he pointed out, two Congresses have already shown more than passing interest in the planning. The Seventy-ninth Congress, he pointed out, set aside $50,000 to further the project. And the past Congress earmarked funds for a continuing program to store newly acquired planes until the museum space is provided, he said.

The air museum of Smithsonian Institution is presently accommodated in a World War I, tin engine testing hangar, at 10th st. and Independence ave., and in Air Hall, a small corner of the Institution's Arts and Industries building. Two of its most famous planes, Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" which first soloed the Atlantic, and the Wright Brothers' first military craft of 1909, are exhibited elsewhere at the Institution.

Space is so crowded, said Garber, that the only other plane to be accepted for immediate display is the Wright Brothers' pioneer plane flown at Kitty Hawk, N. C., in 1903. It is being returned to this country from an English museum.

Under funds provided by the Seventy-ninth and Eightieth Congresses, Garber said, the air museum has built up a nucleus staff of workers and has been able to locate and earmark for acquisition many famous planes. It has also been able to provide for interim storage of some of those planes, and is working out tentative plans for the new building.

He praised cooperation of the Army Air Force and the Navy, which he said are setting aside the majority of planes the new museum will dispay. Under orders from Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold when he was Chief of the Army Air Force, said Garber, the Army is reserving some 60 famous and representative planes.

These include, he said, the Enola Gay, the Swoose, the B-17 bomber which was pieced together out of so many planes it was "neither swan nor goose" and flown out of enemy territory; a B-25 similar to the ones flown in the Doolittle raid on Japan.

Both the Army and Navy collection of planes, said Garber, represent not only American craft but basic types of the Allies and the enemy.

The Navy collection, he said, comprises patrol planes, torpedo planes, Jap Zeros and a host of others.

Private Fliers Aiding

Nonmilitary type planes, Garber said, are being acquired through the cooperation of private fliers, aviation manufacturers and research organizations. They include:

The Diamond, first California-made airplane; the Wiseman-Cooke, which pioneered air mail flight in 1911; the Waterman-Canard, a tail-first plane of the early 30's; the Piper Cub, recently flown around the world by Clifford Evans and George Truman; the Boeing 247-D, which Turner and Pangborn raced in 1934, and countless others.

"All are deserving of a place of honor in the Nation's history of aviation," declared Garber. "It is fitting that this Nation which so leads the world in the development of aviation should also lead the world in recording that development."

Garber said he is convinced that just as one picture is supposed to be worth a thousand words so is one exhibit worth a thousand pictures. Nothing, he said, more stimulates interest in aviation and aviation progress than the viewing and study of the planes that actually are aviation's history.

The proposed new museum, however, will not be used exclusively for the display of planes, he said. Tentative plans would provide for research laboratories, shops, a cafeteria, an auditorium and service facilities for coordination programs with other Government departments.

Since initial expansion appropriations provided by the two recent Congresses, Garber said, planning operations have been under an advisory board headed by Alexander Wetmore, lifetime secretary of Smithsonian Institution.

Active board members include Gen. A. M. Powers, United States Army; Adm. E. M. Pride, United States Navy; and Grover Loening and William B. Stout, both pioneer aviation designers, inventors and fliers, who were appointed to the board by President Truman.

Garber, who served alone, now has an associate curator, Stephen L. Beers, who has a record of 1800 hours of air combat service in the Navy during World War II; Robert Strobell, former Army pilot of a P-47 fighter in European combat, and a secretarial assistant, Mrs. Ann Campbell.

"We're really an air-minded staff," said Garber, who flew planes for the Army in World War I, served Navy aviation in World War II, and was an air mail pilot after the first war until he joined the Smithsonian.

The air museum activities present and future function under the administration of Carl W. Mitman, assistant to the secretary of Smithsonian Institution.

Clothed Nudists at Atlantic City for Bare Convention

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 4 (AP).—Many delegates to the seventeenth annual convention of the American Sunbathing Association came into town today incognito. They were clothed.

Starting next Wednesday at Sunshine Park, some 500 association members will get down to the bare essentials of their meeting.

Dr. Ilsley Boone, 69-year-old superintendent of Sunshine Park, said incoming delegates will be housed and entertained on the 2000-acre establishment.

The most important rule of the park is "clothes of any kind strictly forbidden, without special permission."

The convention calls for two business sessions daily. These will be strictly in the nude, Boone said.

Free time during the convention will be passed by participation in athletic events, including tennis, ping pong, swimming, softball, foot races and horseshoe pitching, Boone said. A number of events will be mixed affairs.

War Crime Judge Suggests Revising International Law

Nuremberg, Germany, Aug. 4 (AP).—A world legal congress to rewrite international law was suggested today by Judge James Morris, Bismarck, N. Dak., one of the jurists who conducted the war crimes trial of the I. G. Farben chemical trust.

"It would be a genuine contribution to the peace," the North Dakotan said in an interview as he packed his bags to return to the United States.

A long step toward a world code was taken by the International Military Tribunal—"which performed splendidly," Judge Morris commented—but there is wide room for more steps. He said the basic Geneva and Hague Conventions are so old now that in some senses they were outmoded during Hitler's "total" war.

Ruhland to Get Clinic Reports

The director of the District's new alcoholic clinic program will report directly to District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Commissioner Guy Mason announced yesterday after a conference in his office.

Previously, Dr. Ruhland had proposed the director be made a part of the present Mental Hygiene Bureau of the department. The citizens' advisory committee had requested he report direct to the Commissioners.

United Corp. Plan Approved Conditionally

The Securities Commission yesterday gave conditional approval to a reorganization plan for the United Corporation, New York.

The plan would retire United's 1,136,199 outstanding shares of $5 cumulative preference stock. This will be in line with SEC's order directing the company to change its capitalization to one class of common stock and to cease to be a holding company.

As filed, the plan would eliminate the preference stock by giving in exchange for each share a "package" of securities and cash.

Each package would consist of one share of common stock of Public Sservice Electric & Gas Co., one share of the Columbia Gas System, Inc., one fourth of a share of Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co. common, one tenth of a share of South Jersey Gas Co. common, and $6 in cash.

At SEC's request, United has stated its willingness to eliminate the one tenth share of South Jersey common and, in substitution, to increase the Cincinnati common stock to three tenths of a share. If so amended, the plan will be approved, SEC's opinion said.

The commission held the proposal to be fair and equitable to the stockholders. It said the company's income can reasonably be expected to be sufficient so that shareholders will continue to receive the $3 annual dividend.

The SEC said reasonably foreseeable earnings will range from $4.29 to $5.55 and reasonably foreseeable dividends from $3.13 to $3.60 a share applicable to the package. It said these will fairly compensate the preference stockholders for the rights they are surrendering.

The plan also will make possible the resumption of common stock dividends by United, which have not been paid since 1937, SEC reported.

The commission overruled objections made by some preferred and common stockholders and also turned down an alternative plan submitted by Randolph Phillips, a common stockholder.

Sewer Bills' Delay Granted

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday granted a four-month extension on the payment of back sewer bills in Sanitary District No. 1, provided one fourth of each bill is paid monthly.

James J. Corbalis, jr., county sanitary engineer, told the board this action should result in collection of a large part of the $4000 in unpaid bills without resorting to court action.

Corbalis told the board in June of a "critical" situation in the district, caused by refusal of some residents to pay the $2-a-month charged for hooking up to a sewer line installed during the war by the Federal Government. The county is negotiating to buy the sewer, but must pay rent to the Government in the meantime.

The district covers the eastern portion of the county extending from Falls Church southeast to the Potomac River.

Corbalis, who has acted as collection agent for the Government, said residents felt the charge was unreasonable and were urging newcomers not to pay. Some bills, he said, have not been paid since the sewer lines were installed four years ago.

The board at that time authorized court action if necessary to clean up the back bills. Corbalis said yesterday it will still probably be necessary to take some cases to court, but that a number of persons in Jefferson Village who had objected to the charge have agreed to pay if given the added time.

Cracks Pierce Falls Church School Walls

School officials and an architect yesterday surveyed Falls Church's Madison School after a warning that the building may have to be condemned unless suitable repairs are made.

Town Building Inspector N. G. Daavid told the Fairfax School Board Tuesday that he found 15-to-20-foot cracks in the school's rear wall and hinted at possible condemnation.

The party inspecting the three-story, brick and cinder-block building yesterday included Fairfax School Superintendent W. T. Woodson, F. T. Hyland, assistant supervisor of buildings for the State Board of Education, and M. G. Norman of the Richmond architectural firm of Dixon & Norman.

They found the long cracks had completely penetrated the 13-inch rear walls of the school. The building was erected about 1928 by the town of Falls Church, before Fairfax took over town schools.

Norman, whose firm has been employed by the Fairfax School Board to design new buildings, said collapse of the cracking wall would not mean collapse of the school. He suggested use of steel tie rods to fasten the wall to steel ceiling beams in the school's cafeteria.

Superintendent Woodson said both recommendations would be considered by the School Board.

Condemnation of the Madison School building would affect roughly 600 students normally enrolled there. The town School Board announced recently that the new Oak Street School, which might have taken up some of the overflow, will probably not be ready for the September 7 opening of school.

'Umpires Riding Us Since McGowan Case,' Nats Say

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

BY REGISTERED mail, Mr. Arch Ward of the Chicago Tribune has called to the attention of National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell, ahem, the refusal of Redskin Quarterback Harry Gilmer to play in the Tribune's All-Star charity game on August 20.

POVICH

Ward is not seeking merely to enlighten Mr. Bell. He's demanding action.

The action Ward wants is for Bell to apply "Paragraph 12" of the leagues agreement with the Tribune Charities, Inc. He's demanding Bell declare Gilmer ineligible to play in the Redskins' five preseason exhibition games pursuant to the contract wherein the league agreed to take such action in the event an invited player who is league property failed to show up for the Chicago game.

Bell is being hauled into the squabble that started with George Marshall's feud with Ward. They frankly don't like each other, and Marshall declared none of his players would figure in Ward's game, if he had any voice in it. Gilmer's refusal to play unless he was protected by an insurance policy by Ward to the amount that would cover the life of his long-term Redskin contract, was scarcely a coincidence following Marshall's blast at Ward.

BELL DECLARED in Philadelphia yesterday that he could not compel Gilmer to play in the game, but the Tribune isn't asking that—only that Gilmer be barred from the Redskins' nonleague games. Ward is prepared, however, to ask for a lot more if the league permits Gilmer to play in preseason games over his protest. Right now Ward is flourishing "Paragraph 17" of his contract with the league.

"Seventeen" is full of teeth, according to Ward. It provides that Tribune Charities can collect as much as $25,000 from the Redskins and $25,000 from their NFL opponents on any day that Gilmer appears in an exhibition game for the Redskins, if he is not excused by Ward from the Chicago game. The showdown is now scheduled for September 2 when the Redskins are listed to play the Los Angeles Rams in Los Angeles in an exhibition.

Ward points out that the Redskins' four exhibition games would leave them liable to fines totaling $100,000, if they defy him and play Gilmer. That item, he says, will give Marshall not only cause for pause, but it also is a matter for Bell's deep concern, and he doubts if the Redskins' opposition will risk $25,000-per-game fines by consenting to play against Gilmer.

"WE HAD MUCH the same kind of case last year," declared Ward. "The Philadelphia Eagles kept their star end, Pete Pihos, out of our game and we insisted he be barred from their exhibitions. The Eagles had Pihos in uniform against the Cardinals at Buffalo in an exhibition game and were ready to defy us. But the Cardinals refused to risk a $25,000 fine and wouldn't take the field until Pihos got out of uniform."

According to Ward, the Rams may take a chance and play against Gilmer if the Redskins insist on using the player, but he doubts that the Bears who play the Redskins in Baltimore, the Packers who play them in Birmingham and the Cardinals who meet the Redskins in Denver will risk the penalties. "The Bears, Cardinals and Green Bay are in our Chicago territory and very friendly with the Tribune and they won't go along with Marshall," says Ward.

From here in, the Gilmer case is in the laps of the legal counsel of the Tribune Charities and the National Football League. Bell declared he would be guided by his legal adviser and Ward said he has turned the matter over to his newspaper's law department.

BELL SAYS the league may claim that Gilmer's refusal to play at Chicago is justified by the Tribune's failure to meet the terms of the contract wherein it agrees to pay all invited players "$150 and expenses." Bell declares he is advised that insurance protection for Gilmer to the amount of his 5-year Redskin contract (estimated at $75,000) is "legitimate expense," a claim at which Ward snorts "Nonsense!—not according to our attorneys."

The Tribune has insured Gilmer up to $17,000 against injury. He wants more. Bell points out that the Tribune insured all players in last year's game and deducted the cost as "expense" of the game before apportioning the pros their share of the gate receipts.

"The insurance we took on the players last season was simply a voluntary action of ours, not provided in the contract," says Ward. "No part of our agreement can be construed as meaning we must include insurance coverage as expense money to the players. The National Football League will be making a costly mistake if it lets Gilmer play any exhibition game." Go to it, counsel!

Walcott Agrees to Bout Here—If It's for Heavyweight Title

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Handlers of Jersey Joe Walcott yesterday snapped up the offer to meet the winner of the Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins fight here, if the match is for the heavyweight championship of the world.

On Tuesday Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, acting for Mrs. Florence Turner, offered Walcott $60,000 or 27½ per cent of the gate to meet the winner of his September 15 bout at Griffith Stadium early in October.

Yesterday the Associated Press quoted Felix Bocchicchio, Walcott's manager, as saying: "That's okay with us. Just as long as the National Boxing Association recognizes the fight for the title."

And there lies the story. Just how and when the NBA can sanction the bout as a title fight is a complicated matter.

Harvey L. Miller, chairman of the District Boxing Commission and executive secretary of the NBA, said yesterday he thinks it will be taken up at the organiza-

Porter Leads U.S. Sweep in High Hurdles

IN LONDON GAMES—Bill Porter (left) of Northwestern University, clears the final hurdle in the 110-meter high hurdle event in the Olympic games yesterday, goes on to win in record-breaking time of 13.9 seconds. American Sets New Mark, 13.9

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—American track and swimming stars earned two more gold Olympic medals today as Bill Porter of Northwestern led his mates to a clean sweep of the 110-meter high hurdles and Ukelele Bill Smith of Honolulu splashed to a surprising triumph in the 400-meter free style swim race.

At the end of five full days of competition, Uncle Sam's men's track team held an overwhelming lead with eight first place winners in 16 events and a total of 156 points.

In swimming, Smith's success gave the American men their fourth straight triumph. It was their third successive new record in the water races.

The 22-year-old Porter skimmed over the sticks in Olympic record time of 13.9 seconds to smash the old mark set by Forrest Towns for American in the 1936 games at Berlin.

It was an American show with Clyde Scott, the football star from Navy and Arkansas, and Craig Dixon of UCLA running close together in the early stages. When Porter put on his final spurt, he edged Scott and Dixon who were clocked in 14.1, equaling the old standard.

The hurdlers' triumph was as complete as the shot-putters yes-

Whitfield Opposes McKenley in "400"

Olympic Stadium, Wembley, England, Aug. 4 (AP).—Mal Whitfield pits his courageous heart and flowing stride tomorrow against the dazzling speed of Herb McKenley over 400 meters—and if Whitfield wins he will become the individual track hero of the 1948 Olympic games.

Already holding the 800-meter championship in Olympic record time, Whitfield, an American Air Force sergeant, meets in the dark Jamaican the world's fastest runner at the shorter distance.

Dodger Rally Tops Cubs, 5-4

Brooklyn, Aug. 4 (AP).—Bruce Edwards singled home the winning run with two out in the ninth inning tonight as the Brooklyn Dodgers whipped the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 4. The triumph moved Brooklyn into undisputed possession of third place, a half game ahead of the New York Giants.

Barron Takes All-American Lead at 136

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Herman Barron of White Plains, N. Y., 1946 champion, surged into the halfway leadership of the $50,000 All-American golf tourney today with a four-under-par 68 for a 36-hole aggregate of 136, eight under standard.

Barron's second straight 68 over wind-swept Tam O'Shanter course gave him a one-stroke lead over Ralph Guldahl, whose record-breaking 64 gave him the opening-round lead yesterday in the 72-hole medal play test.

Slope-shouldered Guldahl, 1937-38 U. S. Open champion, cooled off today with a one-over par 73 as he bogeyed four holes against three birdies.

Barron shaved three strokes off par on the opening nine with a 35 fashioned on three birdies and six pars. On the back nine he took 35, one under par, tapping a pair of birdies, but going one-over-par on the fourteenth.

Barron, an infrequent performer on the professional circuit, won the All-Americans record top prize of $10,500 in 1946. This is Herman's fifth 1948 tourney start.

In third place, two strokes off the pace in the professional phase of Tam's three-ringer carnival was South African Bobby Locke, who fired the second day's best round, a three-under-par 67, for a 36-hole count of 138.

Three strokes behind in the quest for top professional swag of $5000 were Ed (Porky) Oliver of Kenmore, Wash., runner-up in last week's Western Open, and Lloyd Mangrum of the host club, who were deadlocked at 139.

In the women's division, Patty Berg of Minneapolis wrested the lead from her leading professional foe, Babe Didrikson Zaharias of Ferndale, N. Y., by a stroke, 156 to 157.

Red-headed Patty today came up with an 80, while the Babe floundered for an 85 after equalling the women's course record of 72 yesterday.

Trippi Pulls Muscle As Cards Practice

Waukesha, Wis., Aug. 4 (AP).—Charley Trippi, No. 1 halfback of the Chicago Cardinals, suffered a pulled muscle in practice here today as the National League champions prepared for their football game with the College All-Stars in Chicago August 20.

Braves Drop 3d in Row To Lowly Reds, 4 to 2

Boston, Aug. 4 (AP).—For the third time in as many nights the seventh-place Cincinnati Reds tonight defeated the Boston Braves, whipping the National League leaders, 4-2, before 18,916 fans who saw the Reds whip off a fast double play to choke a ninth inning Boston rally after one run had been scored.

It was the fourth successive defeat for the Braves, who twice before this season suffered four consecutive losses.

The Tribesmen's lead was cut to four games as the Cardinals moved into second place by whipping the Giants twice in New York.

Redskins' Gilmer Fails to Accept All-Star Invitation

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Harry Gilmer, former University of Alabama football star, has failed to accept a bid to play in the all star game. This was announced today by an official of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., sponsor of the annual grid classic to be played the night of August 20 in Soldier Field.

In Philadelphia, Commissioner Bell said he had received a letter from Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, in relation to the Gilmer matter.

"I am writing Ward to forward me correspondence between him and Gilmer," said Bell. "When he does I will turn the matter over to the league attorney and take whatever action he recommends."

Browns Rally In 9th to Beat Bosox, 9 to 8

St. Louis, Aug. 4 (AP).—Hard singles by Jerry Priddy and Whitey Platt with two men out in the last of the ninth gave the St. Louis Browns a 9 to 8 decision over the Boston Red Sox. The game started out as a slam-bang slugging match, then settled down into a pitchers' battle between Relief Hurlers Ellis Kinder and Ned Garver.

In the first inning, the Red Sox opened up with a six-run barrage. The fighting Browns got right off the floor, scoring seven runs in their half of the first.

The defeat dumped the Red Sox into fourth place, a half-game behind the idle Philadelphia Athletics.

Joe Kuhel May Protest To Harridge

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—The umpires have it in for the Nats and there may be serious trouble between the Griffs and the boys in blue before the season is over.

This is the unanimous opinion of the Nats themselves, formed and strengthened since the suspension of Umpire Bill McGowan.

McGowan, you'll recall, was set down for 10 days on complaints by the Washington Club that he cursed and abused their players. That was on July 20.

Since that day two Nats have been banished from games and about six others threatened with ejection.

The Washington Club feels that the umpires are out to get even for McGowan's suspension.

Kuhel who has done a miraculous job of making his team hustle in the face of ninth-inning defeats and other troubles, is so vexed over the whole thing that he wants to phone Will Harridge, American League president, and ask him:

"Mr. Harridge, please tell me what to do. I can't present an argument to an umpire without the threat of being chased. I'm not a rowdy nor are any of my ballplayers. We're in the American League like seven other clubs and we believe we have just as much right to dispute a decision as any other team, no matter if we are in sixth place.

"We can't remain quiet and peaceful if we think we have been wronged, yet at the same time we can't protest without having the threat of being chased hung over us. What must we do?

First Banishment

Bounced for the first time in his 19-year career in the majors on July 20, Kuhel got it again in St. Louis over the weekend for arguing over a play at the plate with Umpire Cal Hubbard.

Two days later Sid Hudson was on the verge of being thumbed out by Hubbard for protesting a ball-and-strike decision. Hubbard was

Players Imagining Things, Says Griff

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, last night pooh-poohed his players' complaints that they are getting a harsh deal from the umpires and declared he would not support any protest to League President Will Harridge.

"The players may think the umpires have it in for them since the Bill McGowan case, but I don't believe that's true. Our umpires are not the kind of men who would rub it in on a ball club. They may make mistakes, but they're an honest group. It's easy for a team to imagine it is getting a bad deal from the umpires."

Babe Ruth Improves; Cooler Weather Helps

New York, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Memorial Hospital authorities said today that Babe Ruth felt much better during the night because of cooler weather brought on by rain.

The latest bulletin on Ruth's condition, issued last night, said:

"High humidity and muggy weather made Babe Ruth feel a little low yesterday (Monday) afternoon. However, he spent a good night and felt much better today."

Yanks Win 3d in Team Standings

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—Maj. G. B. Moore of Chevy Chase, Md., placed second today in the Olympic Modern Pentathlon, won by the gritty, record-smashing Capt. W. O. G. Grut of Sweden.

The 34-year-old Swedish artillery officer made modern games history by capturing the rigorous, five-sport event with the record low score of 18 points.

Whittling two points from the mark held by two of his fellow countrymen, Grut gave one of the most magnificent one-man shows of the Olympics as he won first place in three events, finished fifth and eighth in the others.

He was first in horseback riding, fencing and swimming. He was fifth in marksmanship and eighth in today's cross country, final test on the program.

Moore, who was fourth in the 2½-mile run despite a slightly sprained ankle, had 47 points in the general classification.

The other two United States representatives—Lieut. R. L. Gruenther of Omaha, Nebr., and Lieut. Hale Baugh of Council Bluffs, Iowa—finished eighth and thirteenth, respectively, in the general scoring. Greunther had 81 points, Baugh 96.

This was not enough to clinch the team championship for America as the Swedes and Finns shoved ahead. Sweden won the unofficial team title with a low of 167 points. Finland had 221 and the United States, in third, had 224.

Moore finished second in fencing and the 5000-meter horseback ride, fourth in the cross-country run, seventeenth in the 300-meter swim and twenty-first in the pistol shoot.

Walcott May Fight Here

tion's convention at Philadelphia, September 12-15.

"It's very likely that it will be proposed at our annual meeting that the winner of a Walcott vs. Bivins-Charles winner be declared champion of the world and such a proposal then would be left to the votes of the representatives of the 65 NBA Commissions," explained Miller.

Miller admitted that such action depends upon notice of the formal retirement of Joe Louis. He said the NBA probably would sound out Louis. However, even if Louis decided to take advantage of the six-month period allowed him before definitely quitting, the NBA could go ahead and vote to declare the winner of the proposed bout here the champion when Louis does relinquish the heavyweight crown.

It's no secret that the NBA is more than anxious to break the monopoly held by New York, more specifically, the Twentieth Century Sporting Club. Insiders are agreed that the NBA will make every effort to wrest control of the heavyweight title from it.

And that's when the going will get rougher than it is in the ring.

Strauss Not Available

The Washington Post was unable to reach Sol Strauss, acting director of Twentieth Century in the absence of the ailing Mike Jacobs. However, Harry Markson, publicity director, said yesterday that the club would use its September 22 date at Yankee Stadium and would announce its card within a week.

Only a few days ago, Strauss claimed that he practically had arranged a bout for that date between Walcott and Charles. A further postponement of the Charles-Bivins fight from August 9 to September 13 then clouded the muddled heavyweight situation that much more.

Hagerstown Sprint Event To Bay Orders

Special Dispatch to Washington Post

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 4.—Mrs. J. Yancey Christmas of Marlboro, Md., supplied the winner of the appropriately named Marylander Purse in the gelding Bay Orders, which coasted to a five-length victory in the six and one half furlong distanced main event, carded fifth on the program of eight races offered today at this Hagerstown Fair Grounds before a crowd of 6500.

The 4-year-old was installed a $5.20 second choice to Miss Prime and was clocked for the spin in 1:20 2/5 over a fast racing surface. Majeto drove into second place four lengths in front of Miss Prime.

Bay Orders and Miss Prime engaged in a spirited duel for the lead almost with the start. And while Miss Prime succeeded in showing the way for the first three-sixteenths of a mile, the Christmas representative proved too much, managing to wrest command in the run down the back stretch. Once that was accomplished, the contest for winning laurels was practically over. Miss Prime evidently wore herself out fighting with Bay Orders.

Jockey L. Bauer added to his reputation by piloting two winners in Washingtonian Norman Corbin's Flying Moose which returned $11.80 as the hero of the "about five furlongs" second event, covered in 1:05, and Samuel H. Rogers' Gunner in the similar distanced fourth number. The latter paid $4.40 as the choice of the majority and was clocked in 1:04.

Worsham Gets 69, Stroke Behind Junior Medalist

District Boy's Round Best Of Tourney

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 4 (AP).—Tom Matey, 17-year-old shooter from Warren, Ohio, captured medalist honors in the Junior Chamber of Commerce National Junior Golf Tourney today with a 145, one over par for 36 holes of qualifying play.

Marvin Worsham of Washington, D. C., was in a group of four a stroke behind the leader.

Matey, who was three over par with a 75 on the Lincoln Country Club course yesterday, put together a pair of 35s today for a two under 70.

He had to wait until the last threesome came in to know whether he was medalist. That was because yesterday's leader, Mickie Gallagher, checked in with a 77 on 38 going out and a 39 coming in, to pair with his sub par 71 of yesterday.

Tied with Worsham were Eugene Littler, San Diego; Morris Williams, Austin, Tex., and Bob Meek of Tulsa, Okla.

To Worsham went the honor of turning in the best round of qualifying play. That was a sizzling 69, three under par. Marvin, a brother of former National Open Champion Lou Worsham, was two under on the first nine.

Meek, even par yesterday, was two over today, while Williams and Littler, both two over yesterday, were even today.

Worsham had turned in a 77 in yesterday's first 18.

Scores of other juniors from the Washington (D. C.) area were: Bob Halcombe, 82, 82—164; Dennis Bolster, 84, 87—171; Eugene Wolfe, Silver Spring, Md., 84, 78—162; John Eisinger, Bethesda, Md., 83, 89—172; Billy Wolfe, Silver Spring, Md., 81, 74—155; Stanley Mouser, 90, 82—172.

Twelve players had 157s and met in a playoff for five places in match play which starts tomorrow with two 18-hole matches for each qualifier.

'Umpires Ride Us,' Say Nats

one of the umpires in Washington at the time of the McGowan rumpus.

Here against the Indians Tuesday night, Coach Rick Ferrell was run out for arguing that a spectator interfered with a ball that Ken Keltner hit to left field and, in so doing, enabled Larry Doby to score the first Cleveland run. The Nats were leading 2-0 at the time.

Tribe Prexy Bill Veeck, the Cleveland baseball writers and a large percentage of the 72,434 fans saw the spectator grab the baseball and then drop it on the playing field, but Umpires Ed Rommel, Art Passarella and Jim Boyer said they didn't.

Lost in Confusion

Kuhel, Ferrell and all the other Nats charged out on the field in bitter protest. Nobody knew until today that Ferrell had been thumbed, such was the confusion on the field.

In the same game, even mild-mannered Micky Vernon registered a strong beef, one of the few times he's ever opened his mouth to an umpire—or anyone else—since he's been with the club.

"Maybe if we were in the thick of the pennant race we'd get a break," Kuhel said, "because we certainly aren't getting any now. I don't know what's going to happen.

"We've got a lot of young ballplayers on this team and this trouble is bound to have a demoralizing effect on them."

"I'll say this, however, even at the risk of being suspended or fined, we're going to demand that we get our just due from umpires. We're entitled to that in sixth place as much as the team that's in the first place."

Sandlot Teams Play Benefit

Two injured members of the Thrifty Liquors baseball team, Pitcher Jack (Monk) Carney and Catcher Tom McLarney, will receive proceeds of an all-star sandlot baseball game to be played Saturday at 3:30 p. m. on the South Ellipse.

The Washington Post-Industrial League, of which Thrifty is a member, will field an all-star team against the Middle Eastern Service League stars. Carney, former Washington-Lee of Arlington athlete, suffered a torn knee cartilage early in the season.

Firemen Baseball Game, Rained Out, Goes Tonight IF

Rain yesterday turned the Fire Department's benefit baseball game at Griffith Stadium into a false alarm.

The Washington Firemen and their New York counterparts will try again tonight at 8:30.

Washington Manager Morris Clark plans to start Pitcher Ben Harrell, the undefeated 12 game winner, and New York Manager Lieut. Henry Damm will go with Ken Auer, former Fordham University hurler.

Washington's won-loss record of 25-1 establishes it a slight favorite over the New Yorkers who have won 26 of 32 games.

Pregame ceremonies will include a march to the flag pole by Nats President Clark Griffith and Fire Chiefs Clement T. Murphy of Washington and Robert Murphy of New York.

Proceeds of the game will go to the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club and boys' clubs of neighboring areas. Tickets priced at $1 and $2, are on sale at all area firehouses.

Junior Tennis Delayed by Rain

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 4 (AP).—Rain yesterday forced postponement until Thursday of play in the National Junior and Boys' Tennis Championships.

Top-seeded Dick Mouledous of New Orleans, Tony Trabert of Cincinnati and Gil Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md., are rated top contenders in the junior division after three rounds.

Frank Hays Gets Armory Job

Frank D. Hays, 41, former War Department and Reconstruction Finance Corporation engineer, yesterday was appointed technical engineer at the National Guard Armory by Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, Armory manager.

Hays, a resident of Greater Washington since 1937, will receive $5152 a year. His duties include handling of physical facilities at the Armory during events booked there, including radio and television hookups, seating, concessions and public address systems.

A 1930 graduate of Ohio State University, where he was a member of the track and football teams, Hays lives with his wife and two children at 1138 S. Thomas st., Arlington.

In the absence of Bergman, who is studying operation and facilities of Madison Square Garden in New York, Hays will dispense information concerning hiring of the Armory, 2001 E. Capitol st., from his office there.

He said yesterday that numerous letters have been received, inquiring into the possibility of holding opera, symphony concerts, theatrical productions, conventions, sports shows, and other types of events there.

U. S. Five Clinches Finals Berth by Swamping Egypt, 66-28

BASEBALL TODAY 1:30 P. M. DIAL 730 WPIK Wash. vs. Cleveland

London Fans Boo Kurland, Giant Center

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—The United States Olympic Basketball team whipped Egypt, 66 to 28, tonight for its fourth straight victory and an insurance policy into the championship finals.

America's big Bob Kurland, who appeared twice in the game, was roundly booed by the crowd every time he showed his face and a few times in between.

The Harringay Arena crowds, which tonight numbered about 2500, think the seven-foot Oklahoma Aggie is too tall and that it gives the Americans too much advantage.

Big Bob just takes their boos with a wide grin.

The Chineses referee Song, was calling fouls very closely on the Americans. Once he called a double foul, and when Vince Boryla asked why, Song thought he talked too long and called a technical foul against the Americans.

The Americans jumped off to a quick, 7-0 lead at the start and were ahead 32-10 at halftime.

Another Don Hutson?

Millner Say 'Skins' Taylor Will Outclass Other Pro Ends

Los Angeles, Aug. 4.—There'll never be another Hutson, but in the lanky person of Hugh Taylor the Washington Redskins have a reasonable facsimile of the immortal Green Bay end.

That is the opinion of Wayne Millner, himself one of the greatest ends in National Football League history, and now end coach of the Redskins.

The Redskins make no secret of the fact that Taylor will be the principal target for Sammy Baugh and Harry Gilmer this year.

"Taylor is almost as fast as Hutson and is just as good a judge of distance," said Millner today, following a brisk workout at Occidental College.

"The kid's got a fine pair of hands, elusiveness and a tricky change of pace," continued Millner. "You should have seen him in a game against the Philly Eagles last season. Steve Van Buren and Bosh Pritchard thought they had Taylor nailed, but he just shifted gears and ran right away from them."

Like Hutson, Taylor is much too valuable on offense to be used defensively, although his coach says he can handle the job adequately if need be.

In his first league game last year Taylor speared three touchdown tosses. Early in the campaign he was stricken with a mysterious fever which sapped his vitality.

"He's got his health back now, and I know he's going to be great," said Millner.

terday who also swept the first three places in the finals.

Smith's swimming victory, coming late in the day after the track events were completed, was surprising because Jimmy McLane, the 17-year-old lad from Akron, Ohio, and Andover Academy, was expected to launch a double in this 400-meter race. He is favored to take the 1500-meter event later in the week.

Although McLane had set a new Olympic record of 4:42.2 in a trial heat, Smith was too much for him in the finals when he hung up the new Olympic mark of 4:41. These figures obliterated the figures Jack Medica of Seattle, Wash., established at Berlin in 1936 when he won in 4:44.5.

The men's diving team, reduced to two members because of the injury to Miller Anderson of Ohio State, ranked one-two after four of the eight dives in the high diving competition that will be finished tomorrow. Dr. Sammy Lee, the Army medic from Pasadena, Calif., was out front with 51.51 points to 48.94 for Bruce Harlan of Ohio State, the Olympic springboard champ.

The crowd of 75,000, including the King and Queen of England, thrilled to the brilliant performance of Mrs. Fanny Blankers-Koen of Holland, a golden-haired housewife, who won her second title in the 80-meter hurdles. Mrs. Blankers-Koen beat her own world record for the distance by scooting home in 11.2 seconds.

As she already had taken the 100-meter race, Mrs. Blankers-Koen had a chance to eclipse the fine performance of Babe Didrikson—now Mrs. Mildred Zaharias—who had two firsts and a second in 1932 at Los Angeles. Mrs. Blankers-Koen withdrew from the broad jump but she also is entered in the high jump and relay.

Michelene Ostermeyer of France also became a double winner with her winning shot-put effort of 45 feet 1½ inches. She already had won the discus. V. O. Gyarmati of Hungary copped the women's broad jump with a leap of 18 feet 8¼ inches. There were no Americans in the first six, the United States women's team being completely outdistanced in all track and field events.

After leading the qualifiers into the javelin finals, Martin Biles of the University of California dropped into sixth place as Kaj Routavaar of Finland won with a throw of 228 feet, 10½ inches. Dr. Steve Seymour of Los Angeles was second and Bob Likins of San Jose State College was eighth.

Heats in the 400-meter race for men attracted almost as much attention as some of the finals for Mal Whitfield, the 800-meter Olympic winner from Ohio State, is the only male track and field competitor who still has a chance for a double win.

The women's 400-meter relay record really took a beating as the 4:35 mark by Holland at Berlin in 1936, was bettered three times in trial heats. Denmark posted a 4:33.5 in defeating the American girls, who made it in 4:34.1. Then a Dutch quartet regained the record for their native land in 4:31.5. The finals will be held Friday.

The United States contenders were eliminated in the foils division of men's fencing. Silvio Giolito of Woodside, N. Y., and Dean Cetrulo of Hollywood, Calif., were defeated in the semifinals.

Red Spy Disclosures Expected to Tighten FBI Agency Liaison

The Red spy expose on Capitol Hill is bound to have a series of repercussions on the executive agencies. These are possibilities:

1. That the Administration will be forced to state publicly and in detail what it did to investigate and prove the sensational charges. It's known that Democrats are demanding such a statement from either the White House or the Justice Department. The Administration has a good story to tell—that the FBI and a special grand jury investigated the charges involving Federal workers in the spy ring for years but neither was able to substantiate them to any provable degree.

2. A more hard-boiled and serious attitude on loyalty cases. Even top Administration people concede privately that some agencies have been "soft" in dealing with employes who are accused of Red ties. For example, it was widely known that several of the accused former employes had had their loyalty questioned years ago. Nevertheless, a few of them were promoted to bigger and better jobs. Hereafter, it's a good bet that agency heads will place any doubtful people in nonsensitive jobs.

3. A closer working relationship between the agencies and the FBI on employe loyalty matters. The FBI had known for years that William W. Remington was among those accused of giving information to the spy ring. But Remington's employer, the Commerce Department, didn't know it until a few weeks ago when his name came up for a check through the President's loyalty program. Remington was suspended shortly after Commerce was notified of the charges and until his case can be disposed of by the loyalty board. Commerce and other agencies involved believe they should be notified immediately of serious charges against any employe.

4. Another phase of closer working relationships involves new employes. Most new employes are appointed subject to a loyalty check. Meantime, it seems, some of them handle secret information before the inquiries are completed. As a precaution, it's suggested that either the FBI or Civil Service inform the agencies of any serious charges against new employes so they can be kept on routine work until their cases are settled.

Fears are being expresed that the spy expose will be used to smear and discredit the President's loyalty program which only recently has reached high gear. Officials insist that the President's program will prove to be fair and effective if it's given a chance to work. Any major change now would throw the entire program in turmoil and confusion.

After all, nearly all of the people mentioned in connection with the spy ring left the Federal service long before the loyalty program was initiated. . And that program caught up with the only two employes whose names were mentioned and who are still in Government.

Another point Federal agencies would like to clear up is this—that the FBI had sole jurisdiction over any case involving spying. The agencies cannot use their investigative forces to check on any employe accused of espionage. All such information must be turned over to the FBI. And two departments, I'm told, were most anxious to do their own sleuthing of the spy charges when they were first rumored years ago.

STORY: Most Federal employes here this week are receiving their first paychecks that include the $330 annual pay raises. A Government Girl at Treasury told me she decided to celebrate by buying a steak instead of eating the usual hot dogs or cold cuts.

She picked out a small steak, less than a pound, and the butcher told her apologetically the price was $1.08. The girl nodded okay reluctantly. With obvious disgust at the price the butcher asked her:

"Shall I wrap this as a gift?"

FEDERAL employment jumped another 24,885 during the month of June to bring the total to 2,086,220.

This city had the largest increase of Federal workers in any month since during the war. The net boost was 3334 for June. It brings total employment in the executive branch here to 206,116. The June increase was 130-odd new employes for each working day.

The major increases both here and in the field service were in Army, Navy, Air Forces, Postoffice and the Veterans Administration.

And with the money supplied by Congress, employment will continue to rise for many months to come.

NOTES: Max Barash has resigned as chief counsel of the Geological Survey to open a law office here . . . R. J. Taylor has resigned from Reconstruction Finance to be chief examiner of the Philippine War Damage Commission . . . Chairman Rees of the House Civil Service Committee, was renominated easily in Kansas' primary on Tuesday.

Arlington Woman Is 24th Case Of Polio

Paralysis Is Now Epidemic in Parts Of Three States, Rising in Others

The twenty-fourth case of infantile paralysis in Greater Washington was reported to the District Health Department yesterday as 1215 new cases were recorded throughout the Nation for the week ending July 31.

Stricken with the disease is a 22-year-old woman who lives in the 200 block of N. Thomas st., Arlington. She is being treated at Georgetown Hospital. So far this year, 20 District residents have contracted the disease.

The latest victims include two Chase City, Mecklenburg County children, one a 12-year-old boy and the other a 6-year-old girl. Other cases are those of a 10-year-old Culpeper County girl, an 8-year-old Pittsylvania County girl and a 12-year-old Norfolk County girl.

Polio Preventive By Diet Claimed

The U. S. Public Health Service said polio is now epidemic in parts of three States and increasing in some others.

New cases reported for the week ending July 31 compared with 982 the preceding week, 169 for the corresponding week in 1947 and 911 for the same week in 1946.

Throughout the Nation, 5798 infantile paralysis cases were reported this year by July 31, compared with 1742 for the same period in 1947 and 4171 for that part of 1946.

North Carolina, Texas and California accounted for 43 per cent of new cases reported last week. They had 47 per cent of new cases reported for the preceding week.

In 83 N. C. Counties

Said the USPHS:

"There is apparently no indication of extension of the epidemic area in North Carolina, which is the central and west-central area of the State, although a few scattering cases are being reported in counties outside the epidemic area. Up to July 31, cases have been reported in 83 of the State's 100 counties.

"In Texas, the largest number of cases has been reported in Harris, Hidalgo, Cameron, Galveston, Nueces, Tarrant and Bexah counties, with scattering cases beginning to be reported toward the central and northern parts of the State.

"In California the largest number of cases is being reported in the southern part of the State, which is the most populous area."

Man Slashed In Fight Dies; Suspect Held

A 40-year-old man, who was slashed about the chest with a penknife Monday night, died yesterday in Casualty Hospital.

It was the fourth slaying in the District in the first four days of this month.

Police said Brown had been supporting Mrs. Wilson and the children and Wilson objected.

Wilson was arrested on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon after the slashing and was ordered held under $5000 bond. He will appear at a coroner's inquest in the death of Brown at noon today.

Falls Church Will Become Second Class City August 16

First Step in Plan Of Town to Annex Area With 15,000 People in Fairfax

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

The town of Falls Church, Va., will become a city on August 16 under an order issued yesterday by Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown.

The move for second class city status, requested by the Falls Church Town Council, is the first concrete step in that community's tentative plans to annex one square mile of adjoining Fairfax County with an estimated 15,000 population.

Judge Brown granted the council's petition after a census of the town set its official population at 5338. A population of 5000 is needed for a second class city.

Council to Expand

Under yesterday's order, the Falls Church Council will be expanded from six to nine members, with the three new seats filled within 30 days of the effective date.

According to Town Manager Roy F. Dunn, the only new post the new city will have to fill will be that of Commissioner of Revenue.

By attaining city status, the town will be able to levy its own taxes and provide its own assessments, although still being required to contribute to Fairfax County for support of schools, the sheriff's office, and the Circuit Court.

City status also means that the Falls Church Council will act independently of Fairfax on most legislative matters.

It means, too, that Falls Church will acquire immunity from annexation by adjoining areas.

The new city also will be able to provide better services to possible annexed areas, and have more control over its own affairs as a city, officials feel.

Last month, the town council was urged to move to annex five adjoining communities. Dr. Thomas Reed, annexation expert, made the recommendation after a two-day study of the local situation.

Reed, who is working on Roanoke (Va.) annexation problems, said delay in the move would cost Falls Church future revenue and could result in poor area planning and development.

Communities that Falls Church eventually hopes to annex are East Greenway Downs, Jefferson Village, Lee Boulevard Heights and the Birch subdivisions, plus the remainder of Hillwood.

The town council thus far has interviewed two city planning specialists with the aim of employing an expert for a long-range survey of annexation prospects.

The survey, according to Town Manager Dunn, would include potential income from the annexed area, cost of services to it, and equipment and administrative needs.

Town officials have emphasized they hope the communities involved will seek the annexation themselves to receive the benefit of better utilities and service.

No annexation proceedings will be instituted in Fairfax Circuit Court, officials say, unless the communities themselves request the action.

D. C. Workers' Pay Increase Seems Doomed

A decision yesterday by Republican leaders to shoot for early adjournment spelled almost certain doom for passage of legislation boosting District workers' pay.

Representative Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.), House District Committee chairman, has introduced a bill calling for a pay raise financed by a $5,800,000 Federal loan. Yesterday his office was informed this bill would be permitted to reach the floor only if the committees through which it must travel would agree to expedite it.

This prospect appeared unlikely since both Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) of the House District Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs and Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), chairman of the Senate District Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs, have openly opposed the measure.

Representative Dirksen was out of town yesterday, but was expected to return today. His office aides said he probably would try for the cooperation of the committees, but failing that would drop the measure completely.

Dr. Bartemeier is associate professor of psychiatry at Wayne University Colege of Medicine.

October Trial Set

Principal Says Woman Struck Her

A 28-year-old mother was charged yesterday with assaulting the principal of the John Burroughs School during a dispute over a light fixture broken by students.

The mother, Mrs. Jeanette McCray, 28, of 2006 Lawrence st. ne. pleaded innocent in Municipal Court and was granted a trial by jury October 4. Bond was set at $300.

Miss Marie Turner, 48, the principal, charged in a warrant that Mrs. McCray came to the school on June 23, hit her on the jaw and slammed a door on her arm.

Events leading up to the alleged assault were as follows, according to Miss Turner:

Four pupils, including Mrs. McCray's 9-year-old son, Wilson, were throwing a ball during the last week of school and broke a light in the school building.

A conference of teachers was called, Miss Turner said, and it was decided for "educational purposes" to have the children pay for the fixture out of their allowances voluntarily.

Miss Turner said the light cost $8. Each child was asked to get $2. All except Mrs. McCray sent in apologetic notes, Miss Turner said. Wilson paid the money, however.

"I did not think the parents would doubt my integrity so I didn't imagine I had to give receipts," Miss Turner said.

Mrs. McCray had her son go back to school later and demand a receipt. It was not given him, Miss Turner said, because she wanted the boy to tell his mother that he hadn't asked for a receipt when he first gave the principal the $2.

Upon learning that Mr. or Mrs. McCray intended to visit the school to discuss the matter, school authorities decided to keep Wilson's report card. Miss Turner said she hoped to use it as a "focal point" in discussing the boy's development with his parents as it related to the light-breaking incident.

But the discussion was unsatisfactory and Mrs. McCray was asked to leave the school, it was said. It was then that the assault took place, according to the teacher.

Soon after the assault, Mrs. McCray filed suit to recover the $2 and challenged Miss Turner's right to accept funds for damaged District property. This suit is to be heard in September in Small Claims Court.

Slayer Wins Presidential Clemency

Truman Commutes Death Sentence of Father of 5 Who Killed in Holdup

President Truman yesterday commuted to life imprisonment the death penalty imposed on Floyd P. Wilson, 33, convicted holdup murderer.

Wilson

Wilson shot to death Milton E. Lowe, 46, of 1526 Neal st. ne., February 8, 1947 in a blundering attempt to get at a parcel containing $10,000, the weekend receipts of a Giant Food Market, 3924 Minnesota ave. ne.

Wilson, father of five children, took the news of the commutation calmly, District Jail guards said. When his wife heard of it, she exclaimed:

"I'm as happy as a lord."

Mr. Lowe's widow and mother of his four children could not immediately be reached to comment.

Under terms of the commutation Wilson becomes eligible for parole in 15 years. He was to die in the electric chair on August 20.

On the day of the murder, Wilson, an unemployed carpenter, was penniless, in debt and his house was without heat, in the 15-degree cold. He told his wife he was going to get $17 for a ton of coal.

Lowe was sitting in an automobile outside the Giant Store with the receipts entrusted to him by his brother-in-law, who managed the market. Wilson approached and after a short tussle, Lowe was shot and Wilson fled, only to be captured by police at his home. He confessed.

A District Court jury convicted Wilson of murder in the commission of a felony for which the death penalty is mandatory. But the jury at the same time recommended leniency.

In urging the President to grant mercy, Defense Attorney Charles E. Ford pointed out that Wilson had a spotless record prior to the murder, that he was apparently driven to the crime by his financial situation, that the family of the victim felt sorry for Wilson's family and sought no revenge.

Neither the trial jurist, Justice Alexander Holtzoff, nor the United States attorney's office opposed the granting of clemency.

The Wilson family has been living at their home, 5804 Cleveland ave., Riverdale, Md., with help from the Prince Georges County Welfare Department. One child has been placed with a grandparent, the other on a farm.

"Still it's mighty lean days when six have to live on $100 a month as we do," commented Mrs. Wilson.

9 More Groups Join Battle on Fare Increase

Consumer Outfit Allowed by PUC To Enter Hearing, Quiz Witnesses

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday resumed hearing Capital Transit Co.'s request for an increase in streetcar and bus fares, and authorized one more group to intervene in the case.

The new group, fourth to signifty it wished to cross-examine the company's witnesses, is headed by the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection. David Cobb, attorney for the committee, said the group represents eight other organizations.

In permitting the fourth intervenor, PUC members ruled that WCCP represents all other associations listed in its petition and that representatives of these other associations may not cross-examine witnesses or file separate intervenor petitions.

New Groups Listed

The new groups, in addition to WCCP, are the Washington Industrial Union Council (CIO), the Potomac Cooperative Association, the Washington Committee for Wallace (Progressive Party), the Women's Auxiliary of the United Public Workers of America, Local 209; Hotel, Restaurant Employes, Bartenders and Pastry Cooks, the Federation of Civic Associations, the Washington League of Women Shoppers and the Emma Lazarus division of the Jewish Peoples Fraternal Order.

Already approved as intervenors are the Federation of Citizens Associations, Americans for Democratic Action and the American Veterans Committee.

The Capital Transit Co., which wants to raise its cash fare from 10 to 15 cents, sell two tokens for a quarter, and increase price of weekly pass from $1.50 to $1.85, yesterday presented figures showing an 0.2 per cent increase in cost of general rail operations during the first four months of 1948 compared with the same period of 1947.

Decrease in Bus Costs

Other figures showed a 2.1 per cent decrease in cost of bus operations for this period.

Among witnesses who appeared to protest the proposed rate increase yesterday was P. H. Delaplaine, 5001 13th st. nw., representing the Arkansas Avenue Community Association, who declared that by "trick mathematics," figures can be made to prove anything.

Delaplaine charged the reduction in riders of Capital Transit vehicles is due to poor service. He declared rush-hour service now "is on a sardine basis rather than a service basis."

William B. Saunders, 1518 K st. nw., who said he was a transportation consultant speaking as a private citizen, declared any increase in the public transportation rate would "unquestionably reduce the number of short riders" on transit vehicles. He said the company should consider the desirability of establishing fringe parking lots, from which express service could be provided to downtown areas, in order to interest long-haul riders in public transportation service.

Says Glover Park Penalized

Owen S. Parmele, 3733 W st. nw., treasurer of the Glover Park Citizens Association, complained that since his group last protested to Capital Transit against rate hikes, two bus routes serving the area have been reduced. "It would appear," he said, "that the Capital Transit Co. has already penalized citizens of Glover Park for appearing in this case."

Mrs. Bryson G. McIlwee, 507 Quackenbos st. nw., speaking as a citizen, objected to any increase in bus and streetcar fares at this time, and asked for removal of beer advertisements from streetcars and buses.

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday resumed hearing Capital Transit Co.'s request for an increase in streetcar and bus fares, and authorized one more group to intervene in the case.

Marsha's Clean

Bath Costs Dad Broken Shoulder

The Washington Post

IT WAS LIKE THIS—Marsha Castle, 5, shows her twin brother Mark, how she was washing her doll after having locked herself in the bathroom, so securely that her dad, a policeman, couldn't break in Four-year-old Marsha Castle knew she had been naughty Tuesday evening when she played with her doll in the mud puddle near her home at 19-F Ridge rd., Greenbelt, Md.

Trying to avoid punishment, she decided to bathe herself and the doll behind locked doors. Her decision cost her father, Police Pvt. Cecil M. Castle, of the Twelfth Precinct, a fractured left shoulder, when he tried to break down the bathroom door to rescue Marsha.

It seems that Marsha and her twin brother, Mark, had been freshly bathed and dressed and been told to stay out of the mud puddles. The temptation to play was too much for Marsha, however, and both she and her doll ended up covered with mud.

With childish wisdom, Marsha went quietly into the bathroom, locked the door and bathed the doll in the basin. Then she climbed into the tub to give herself a bath, but forgot to turn off the water in the basin.

When the water started to spill over, Marsha became frightened. She tried to get out of the bathroom but the door was locked.

Her frantic screams brought her dad, who remembered a time when she had scalded herself with hot water from a faucet. He set his shoulder to the heavy plywood door.

The door wouldn't give, but Marsha's mother, Mrs. Irene Castle, finally quieted the child by talking to her and Marsha unlocked the door herself.

The excitement died down after everyone made sure Marsha was all right. It was another story for her dad. He had to be treated at Casualty Hospital.

Bus Lines Joint Rates Go Up Friday

Some 3,500 Washington residents who work in nearby Virginia will begin paying higher bus fares at 12:01 a. m. Friday.

Vice President E. C. Giddings announced yesterday that the Capital Transit Co. at that time will begin charging an additional 3 cents on District-Virginia joint rate tickets. The increase is allowed under a temporary injunction won by the company Monday.

The injunction—issued yesterday—allowed the firm to add 3 cents a ride to the present joint rate of $1.92 for 12 rides, which went into effect Monday. Capital Transit, thus will receive 10 cents in all per ride.

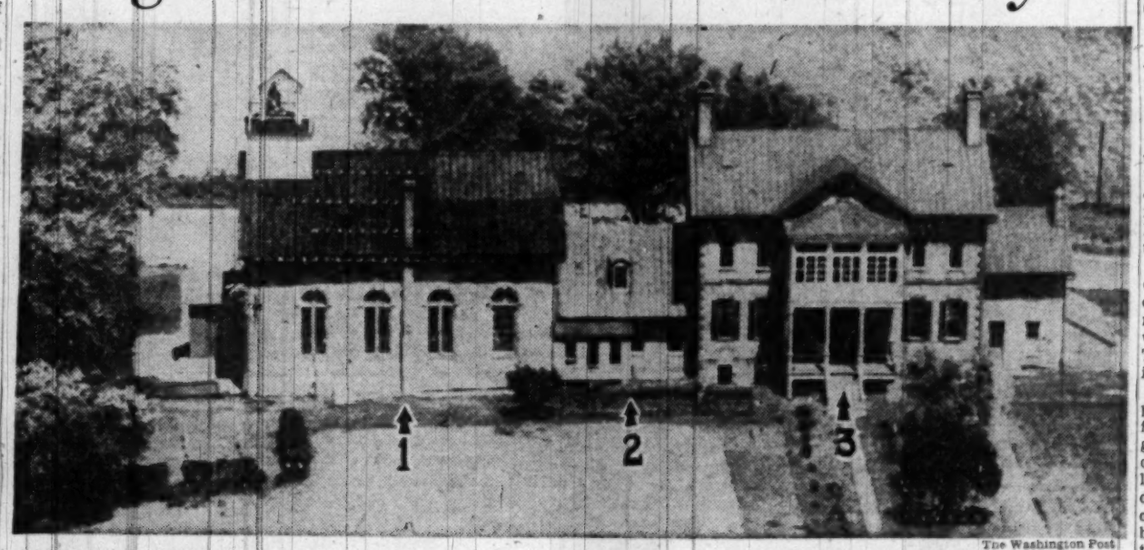
The 3 cents cash plus an appropriate portion of a 16-cent joint fare ticket purchased from Virginia carriers will be good for one ride on the Capital Transit lines within the District, Giddings said. This will bring to 19 cents the total fare for one ride between Washington and the Pentagon, Air Forces Annex, Navy Annex, Washington National Airport and points en route.

Passengers will receive a "refund" receipt at the time the additional 3 cents is paid to the Capital Transit operator. In the event the District Court finally determines the injunction should not be made permanent, the company will redeem the receipt for 3 cents. Each receipt must be signed by the person receiving them. They are not transferable.

Giddings said an order had been placed for 100,000 stripped ticket "refund" receipts and delivery is expected in time for distribution to operators tonight.

The firm yesterday posted a $25,000 bond and the three-judge tribunal that authorized the temporary injunction on Monday yesterday signed it, making the order officially effective.

St. Ignatius' to Mark Anniversary



The Washington Post

SESQUICENTENNIAL—The cornerstone of St. Ignatius Church (1) at Chapel Point, Md., which celebrates its 150th anniversary Saturday, was laid 150 years ago on August 7. The chapel (2), now joining the church to the manor house (3), was built in 1662. The Manor House, for many years the seat of the Jesuit Order in Maryland, was erected in 1741

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Services commemorating the 150th Anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of one of America's most historic churches, St. Ignatius' Church at St. Thomas' Manor, near Bel Alton, Md., will be held at the church Saturday.

According to the Rev. Fr. Herman Stonk, pastor, "in the 13 original colonies, St. Ignatius' Church is the oldest extant Catholic church used as such by continuously resident pastors."

This year's celebration, which will culminate in a Sesquicentennial celebration, Sunday, September 26, will also mark the 300th year since the site at St. Thomas Manor became the property of the Jesuit Fathers.

The church is the youngest of three buildings on the hill above Chapel Point, overlooking the Potomac River where the Port Tobacco River enters into it. St. Thomas' Manor House, built in 1741, is joined to the church by the old chapel, built in 1662.

Saturday's services will be the second incident of the celebration. Last Saturday, at 11 o'clock, 120 children of the parish, who were attending the Vacation School of Religion, carried a brick in a gilded basket to the old cornerstone. As the church bells were rung the brick was deposited by one of the boys, Richard Yates, at the spot where exactly 150 years before to the hour, the Rev. Father Charles Sewall laid the first brick in the foundation wall.

Later the procession moved on to the priests' cemetery, and a circle was formed around the grave of Father Sewall. Prayers were said and flowers placed at the tomb.

The date was fitting. Last Saturday was the feast of Saint Ignatius Loyola, patron of the church. Saturday's ceremony had its origin in an old document found in the archives of Woodstock College, Woodstock, Md.

The children were shown a copy of this document. On the flyleaf of the cashbook of Father Charles Sewall, the man who built the church had written:

"On the 31st Day of July in the year of Our Lord 1798 at 11 o'clock in the morning, the Subscriber laid the first brick in the foundation was of the Church of St. Ignatius of Loyola. Cs Sewall."

Saturday's services commemorating the cornerstone laying will take place from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. It will be 150 years to the day since Bishop John Carroll, the first American Catholic Bishop, laid the cornerstone on August 7, 1798.

Contractor Fined

John Santolemma, 53, a plastering contractor of Bradbury Heights, Md., was fined 50 yesterday for failing to provide first-aid kits, gussets and bubblers for his workmen in a job at 2741 Nichols ave. se.

Judge John P. McMahon said he knew what first-aid kits were, but what, he asked, are gussets and bubblers?

Court attaches explained a gusset is a metal plate used to reinforce joints such as those on a scaffold. A bubbler is a portable sanitary drinking fountain. Both are required by industrial safety regulations.

Rats in Rooming House

S. Geriah Lamkins, 80, of 1401 12th st. nw., was charged yesterday with operating a rat-infested lodging house at 1313 R st. nw.

According to testimony of Health Inspector Coleman Holmes in Municipal Court, the R street residence had rat holes and burrows in the basement and attic. In addition, Holmes said, a second-floor roomer kept a light burning outside a rat-hole to keep the rodents out of the bedroom.

Judge John P. McMahon continued the case until Wednesday to give Lamkins an opportunity to remedy the situation.

Wife Uppity, He Hits Her

A 75-year-old carpenter was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with hitting his 63-year-old wife over the head with a baseball bat.

The defendant, James H. Monroe, 75, explained it this way:

"My wife, Mary, who is considerably younger than I am, has been getting uppity lately and we've been having trouble. She's my third wife."

Mrs. Monroe is in Gallinger Hospital for observation, not so much because of the assault which occurred early yesterday as for a previously incurred heart condition, it was reported.

Judge Armond Scott continued the case until Friday for hearing and placed Monroe under $100 bond on a simple assault charge.

More Police Sought

Need for additional police protection for the county will be discussed at a meeting of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation at 8 tonight in the County Service Building, Hyattsville, Md.

The county, with a population larger than adjoining Montgomery County, has about one third the number of policemen, Mulligan said.

AAA Sues AA

A suit was filed yesterday in District Court by the American Automobile Association, which uses "AAA" as its official emblem, to stop the United States Automobile Association from using the symbol "AA."

Releases Evidence

Stafford D. Lowry's digestive tract, which for several days had been uncommonly valuable because of a $350 ring he had swallowed, yesterday lost its inflated value.

As a result, police now have the ring for evidence, and the $10,000 bonds on Lowry for alleged robbery of the ring and sodomy is due to be lowered today. The high bond had been levied at the request of prosecutors to insure that Lowry remain temporarily in police custody.

Employe Facing Probe in Building Inspectors Office

District Building rumors that some building inspectors have been enjoying the movies when they were supposed to be inspecting buildings gained some credence yesterday.

Assistant Engineer Commissioner Carlin Whitesell said "at least one" employe of the building inspector's office is being investigated "for dereliction of duty." The engineer official said the investigation would be completely shortly.

Whitesell stated that an employe who is found guilty of neglecting his duty is subject to suspension or dismissal.

Building Inspector Robert H. Davis declined to comment on the situation. He admitted that at least one investigation was under way, however.

Dolls of Many Varieties From Many Lands

THEIR HOBBY—Mrs. Elsie Jachowski, 1007 Hamlin st. ne., and her daughter, Mrs. Frances Van Winkle, visiting her from Oak Ridge, Tenn., with just a few from their collection of approximately 1800 dolls. The one in the carriage dates back to the early days after the Civil War. It has leather hands. On Mrs. Jachowski's lap are a Moroccan leather doll and a fine French specimen made about 1880. Dolls Are 'Miniature People,' Says Woman With 1800 Guests

Mrs. Elsie Jachowski, whose home at 1007 Hamlin st. ne., is crammed with 1800 dolls from every corner of the earth, becomes indignant when people talk of doll-collecting as a children's pastime.

"They're miniature people—and you can study people through them," says the former president of the Dollology Club.

One of 52 active members of the club, made up of enthusiastic collectors of rare, antique or just amusing dolls, Mrs. Jachowski says her hobby rivals stamp collecting in popularity now.

She buys most of her dolls, at an average cost of $15, at antique stores, junk stores, and auctions, she said. Others are sent to her by friends in foreign lands.

Born two blocks from the White House, Mrs. Jachowski has never traveled and likes to specialize in foreign dolls, which, she says, give her a chance to study other cultures.

A Chinese "wish-doll," a 1-inch replica of a Japanese committing hara-kiri made during the last war, Mrs. Jachowski picked up for a nickel at a junk shop here. A real Chinese household Buddha cost her $4 in an antique store.

A braided palm symbol of the rice goddess, Tjili, used in the Orient to bless the rice fields, and an American Katchina doll, which represents the dead man's soul at Southwest Indian funeral ceremonies, are other items in her collection.

Mrs. Jachowski, who hopes the Dollology Club, will some day found a doll museum in Washington, has started club members on an international doll-exchange project with natives of Portugal, France, Hungary, the Philippines and South America.

President of the Dollology Club is Miss Irene M. Pistorio of 2442 20th st. nw. The club was founded by Miss Josephine R. Garrison and Mrs. Virginia Wooden.

Famed Fighter Against War Is Dead at 70

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Rosika Schwimmer, 70, whose lifelong fight against war brought her nominations of five nations for this year's Nobel Peace Prize, died yesterday.

Mrs. Schwimmer

She was a backer of Henry Ford's ill-fated "peace ship" to Europe in 1915.

She was a prominent suffrage leader in her native Hungary and in 1918 was appointed Hungarian minister to Switzerland, a post she held until the fall of the liberal government of Count Michael Karolyi in 1920.

She became news in 1933 when she tried to get leaders of many nations to sign an appeal to have Mussolini interned in an insane asylum.

Her nomination for the Nobel Prize, made by Parliaments of Britain, France, Sweden, Italy and Hungary, was indorsed by many university professors in this country.

Recently she willed her brain to the Wilder brain collection at Cornell University.

Cardinal Sibilia

Cardinal Sibilia was Bishop of Sabina and Poggio Mirteto. By virtue of his age and seniority he was eligible for the office of dean of the College of Cardinals, vacated by the recent death of Gennaro Cardinal Granito Pignatelli di Belmonte, but he was unable to assume the office because of his health.

Cardinal Sibilia's death reduces the college to 59 cardinals, leaving 11 vacancies.

A veteran of the Vatican diplomatic service, Cardinal Sibilia was ordained a priest in 1884 and was chaplain of Rome's St. Agnes Church until 1890, when he left to become auditor of the Nunciature in Bogota, Colombia.

He subsequently served in diplomatic posts in Brazil, Belgium and Spain and for a time was apostolic delegate in Chile. After World War I he became Papal Nuncio to Austria.

He was made a cardinal by Pope Pius XI at the consistory of December 16, 1935.

Funeral services will be held in the Cathedral of Anagni, probably on Friday.

Gen. Murray

A native of West Point, N. Y., and a graduate of the Military Academy, General Murray was a colonel in the Fifth Field Artillery of the First Division in France during World War I. In World War II he commanded several bases in the South Pacific.

In 1938 he commanded the Washington Provisional Brigade.

General Murray was assigned to the Coast Artillery Corps following his graduation from West Point and served for nine years at several stations, including the Philippines, San Francisco, Fort Monroe, Va., and West Point.

From 1920 to 1924 he was stationed in the office of the Chief of Field Artillery in Washington. Thereafter, until 1929, he attended service schools, graduating from Coast Artillery School, Field Artillery School, Command and General Staff School and the Army War College.

Another period of service in the Philippines found him on the staff of the Governor General from 1929 to 1932. He was on the Field Artillery Board until 1936, commanded several artillery organizations and was made a brigadier general in 1938.

In 1940 he went to Hawaii where he commanded the Eleventh Field Artillery Brigade and the Twenty-fifth Infanty Division, returning to the States in 1942 to head the Southern California defense sector.

He was promoted to major general in July, 1941, and retired two years ago.

In addition to his wife, he leaves a son, Lieut. Col. Arthur M. Murray of West Point, who was on leave for a visit with his parents, and a daughter, Ann, wife of Lieut. Col. Robert W. Van de Velde, assistant military attache at Athens.

Graveside services and burial will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at Arlington Cemetery.

D. C. Naval Officer Escapes Drowning As Boat Capsizes

Capt. James Collins Landstreet, 3628 Windom pl., nw., and Capt. James E. Petersen were 1000 feet offshore attempting to land a large bass when their boat overturned, dumping them, fully clothed, into the water.

They were hauled to shore by a nearby motorboat, whose operator threw them a line. The two men managed to tow their craft and equipment with them as they were pulled to shore. They suffered no ill effects.

Son and Daughter to Marry

Two Weddings in Family Keep Mrs. Woods Busy

By Marie McNair

WITH two weddings in her family within the span of a fortnight's time, Mrs. Arthur Woods isn't wondering what to do with the rest of the summer.

At her house in Georgetown for a few days, the former Deputy Director of the WAC is leaving for California in a few days. Her daughter, Carolie, who'll be married in October to Lieut. Valentine Hollingsworth, jr., USMC, of Boston, will join her there and the two will be in Colorado Springs September 18 for the wedding of Mrs. Wood's son, Leonard, and Anina Paepcke, daughter of the Walter Paepckes of Chicago, at Perry Park Ranch, their summer home at Larkspur, Colo. Coming East on their honeymoon, Leonard Woods and his bride will be in Washington for Carolie's wedding in Christ Church Georgetown on October 2.

MRS. McNAIR

Mrs. Woods is planning the wedding reception in the walled garden of Laird House, once the home of Robert Todd Lincoln, son of the famous "Abe." For generations, Laird House was owned by members of the Laird and Dunlop families, Georgetown pioneers.

When Mrs. Woods purchased the property—it's actually three separate houses—she restored them all, and for a time occupied Laird House herself. It's now leased to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, who will turn the house over to its owner for the wedding festivities.

Mrs. Woods prefers the smaller Coach House on Thirtieth st. to live in and during the war Laird House was occupied by the Deering Howes. It was in the big house that Carolie made her debut, two seasons—or was it three summers ago? Members of the Morgan clan—and its a vast one, presumably will gather here for the wedding.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of the late Col. Arthur Woods one time Police Commissioner of New York, and the granddaughter of Mrs. Morgan Hamilton of New York. Her great grandfather is the late and great J. Pierpont Morgan and she's the great niece of Miss Anne Morgan, noted philanthropist.

At the moment Carolie Woods is a member of the art colony at Gloucester, Mass., working hard at sculpture for which those who know her say she has a great gift.

TOWN TOPICS: Lucille Leimert and Verbena Hebbard of Los Angeles, who enlivened the Washington scene on several occasions, are collaborating on a book with one chapter to be titled "Southlanders in Washington."

Incidentally, Mrs. Leimert, who's a real live wire, writes to her friends here that sh has cut her hair, taken off a lot of weight and really has the new look.

The Phyllis Bell School which goes in for self-improvement, social counseling, poise, posture and carriage, reports that half of their telephone inquiries are from men, asking if they have a course for men on how to treat women now that they've gone feminine again with ruffles, fans and the new helpless look.

Fay Lewisohn is expected to bounce into town today from Reno where she's been, but not for the usual reason. She'll be with her aunt, Mrs. Martin Vogel for a few weeks.

Fath Follows Straight, Narrow Pattern in Skirts for Fall

Paris, Aug. 4 (U.P.). — When Jacques Fath, leading Parisian designer, paraded his fall and winter fashions today he showed skirts so straight and narrow even one of his own models tripped and fell flat on her face.

Most of Fath's tubular skirts were for evening wear, however. They had a maximum of 25 inches walking space at the bottom.

For daytime, Fath showed a variety of narrow, but wearable skirts with normal waistlines. His skirts were also shorter than last year—10 to 12 inches from the floor.

Fath unveiled his new silhouette in a dramatic floodlit fashion show in his garden, before a crowd of more than 500 fashion experts, including American buyers.

He favored: normally rounded, unpadded shoulders, tiny waists and either sheath-like or draped skirts. Most of his dresses were cut breathtaking low in front.

Some cocktail or afternoon dresses featured double skirts, tulle or lace over shimmering satin. Fath also plugged suits in gray and rose with short jackets and 4 inches of peplum.

Red Hues Favored By Designer Carven

Paris, Aug. 4 (AP).—It's going to be a red autumn if French designer Carven has her way.

In her fall collection she exploits every conceivable hue of red—from deep tomato to fire engine red.

Main silhouette in the show lays the emphasis on tiny waists and draws attention to hip detail.

Main line of interest falls around the middle of the torso. She divides nearly all her dresses into three sections. They comprise a bodice which reaches to just below the bust; a wide waist-yoke, molded to the waist by discreet panelling of darting, sometimes by a belt, and finally, a skirt which picks up where the yoke finishes. This last frequently has gathered or unpressed pleated fullness.

Saucy jackets introduce a new waistline.

A fine black wool suit had a brief jacket with a narrow peplum which started 4 inches above the natural waistline. Another jack of black lamb had the same high waistline drawn tight, this time, with a drawstring. It had immense leg of mutton sleeves.

The favorite for more than 100 years

Long Island Sound Retreat

Fishers Island, Lost in King's Dice Game, Now Is Summer Playground

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

FISHERS ISLAND, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Though Fishers Island, a nine-mile strip of wooded, nicely beached land, is two miles from Connecticut and 18 miles from New York, it belongs to the latter State because Britain's King Charles first had lousy luck at craps. Shooting dice with the then current Duke of York, his majesty, losing plenty, paid off inexpensively by granting his ducal opponent all islands in Long Island Sound.

Though the island had been used as a health resort by local Pequot Indians, heavens knows how long before it was "discovered" early in the seventeenth century by Adrian Block, an up and coming gent who sailed from Manhattan in a sloop appropriately named the "Restless."

Some say the island was named after Block's companion, Fischer, others say it was so called because the Indians fished there. The choice is yours. Anyway Connecticut's colonial Governor John Winthrop, jr., a brother of Massachusett's more famous Governor, built himself a mansion and used the island as personal plantation.

Pirates skipped in and out. Among passing Kidd's effects were found maps of the island. This resulted in a rash of treasure hunters. One mysterious crew dug secretly, slipped away quietly, is reported to have discovered gold.

The average islanders' closest contact with Captain Kidd is Treasure Pond and Money Pond, but once a school girl did find some coins on Isabelle Beach, named after a Spanish boat wrecked off shore.

Biggest haul came in prohibition days when a rum runner was shipwrecked nearby and deposited 820 cases of Haig and Haig on the sands.

Fishers Island was later bought by the family of John Fox, the novelist. Walton Ferguson, a Pittsburgh businessman, visited the island with Andrew Mellon in the late 80's, decided it was a wonderful spot for a game preserve. With his brother, Edmund Ferguson, he bought the island which gradually began to expand under their aegis. Today it is reviving from wartime restriction due to the presence of Fort Wright, one of the ring of forts guarding New York City approaches.

Summer Colony Numbers Thousand

THE summer colony numbers about a thousand. There are two clubs, one elaborate, the other simple.

Commodore of the Yacht Club is Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John Nicholas Brown, whose wife, the former Anne Kinsolving, is a member of one of the island's leading summer families. Her father added to his Baltimore duties summers by being minister of the local church.

At one time the most popular local question was whether there were more Fergusons, Kinsolvings, or rabbits. Many of the summer residents live in small cottages rented completely equipped from the Fishers Island Farms. Among them are the National Gallery's Johnnie Walker, an assortment of duPonts including Lammot, Pierre 3d and Reynolds. Mrs. Jock Whitney, who was the wife of Jimmy Roosevelt, is here and commutes to Long Island and Connecticut in a DC-3 and a motor cruiser.

Within the past few weeks the American Yacht Club cruise and the Shelter Island Yacht Club cruise have stopped off and the sea plane cruise, the annual junket from the Aviation Country Club at Hicksville, also popped in. On the side there is deep sea fishing and the usual country sports plus activities inaugurated at Fort Wright. Planes skip to LaGuardia Field in less than an hour, it is only 14 minutes flying time to East Hampton and the ferry to New London eases there in a leisurely three quarters of an hour.

Luman—Muir

Miss Euretta Rose Muir, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Muir of Washington, became the bride of Lloyd L. Luman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luman of Miami, Fla., in the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, on July 27, the Rev. F. B. Burress officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace over taffeta with a finger-tip veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Harris White attended the bride and Harris White served as best man. The ushers were C. A. Ranning and Richard Bailey.

Myers—Goulding

Miss Helen Lee Goulding, daughter of Mrs. Grandison S. Goulding of Washington and the late Mr. Goulding, became the bride of Douglas Lee Myers, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Price Myers of Mt. Rainier, Md., on August 1 in the Brookland Baptist Church. The Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Charles G. Goulding, the bride wore a white marquisette gown with a bertha of duchess lace. Her finger-tip veil of shadow illusion was held by a white rose headpiece and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of white roses and an orchid.

Mrs. Charles G. Goulding was the matron of honor and John P. Hill served as best man. The ushers were Francis M. Leapley, Richard C. Beavers and Warren C. Yost.

Following the reception at the home of the bride's mother, the couple left for a Virginia Beach wedding trip. On their return they will reside in Washington where the bridegroom is attending Benjamin Franklin University.

Tips to Keep You Cool While on Reducing Diet

This is the fourth of a series of six articles on "Summer Slimming" with budget menus by diet expert Ida Jean Kain.

By Ida Jean Kain

BOILED DOWN, all the weatherman is predicting is that it will positively stay hot . . . until it cools off. So let's aid nature's cooling system . . . the idea is to get rid of body heat.

Will hot soup or a beverage help? There's a theory that it will —but before you put the kettle on, consider the humidity.

IDA JEAN KAIN

On a hot, dry day the hot beverage would work fine, for perspiration helps cool you off. But when the humidity is high, a hot liquid would only make you hotter. The perspiration induced is not quickly evaporated and adds to the general discomfort. So stick to cool drinks on a sultry day—they require body heat to warm them in the stomach and therefore help carry off body heat.

It's important to drink plenty of liquids in the summer—water, milk, fruit juices —since the loss of water from the body is accelerated during hot weather. But don't go overboard for ice-cold beverages. While it's always refreshing to sip a cool drink, gulping down ice-cold ones is a shock to the nerves of the stomach.

And what about cold showers? Sure they feel wonderfully cooling at the moment, but the catch is that the cold water stimulates the body to get up steam and the blood is brought to the surface. A luke-cool shower leaves you more refreshed than a very cold one.

In this age of science, we might as well apply it to taking a tub bath. To prevent getting overheated, let the water run cold until almost the level desired, then turn on the hot water and let it run until the water is tepid. That way the room doesn't become filled with steam, and you don't emerge with that parboiled feeling.

WATCH YOUR CHOICE OF FOOD. In warm weather, a muscular relaxation sets in which reacts on the digestive tract. Don't tax it with heavy, rich foods. Summer meals should be lighter, but it isn't wise to switch suddenly to cold foods at all meals. If you're used to eating a cold lunch, all right, but have something hot at the other meals. And sprinkle extra salt on salads, melons and vegetables, for more salt than usual is lost from the body during a hot spell.

Don't hurry—that generates heat. And last, don't get worked up over anything—that's heating, too!

To keep your boiling point low and your weight down here are your fourth day budget menus:

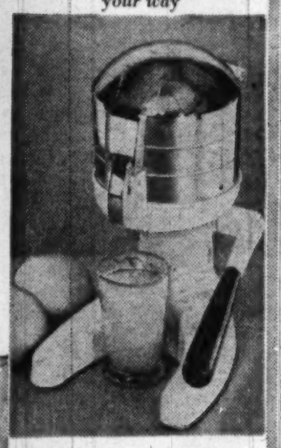
Making It Easier

ONE, two, three ways to make life easier in the home! Pictured here is a trio of work-saving, time-saving devices that recently reached the Washington market and stand ready to help you do your household duties with a minimum of effort and annoyance

HERE'S a dryer that "knows" when your clothes are dry! This new model is controlled by a thermostat that is responsive to the amount of moisture in the clothes. You set the dial for the dryness or dampness you want and the machine does the rest. It is styled as a companion piece to a new automatic washer that boasts an unusual water-saving feature. The latter enables you to use only a small amount of water when you have a "handful" of washing to do. The white cabinets of washer and dryer are identical in size and shape

NO short or tangled cord will complicate your ironing if you have the handy attachment shown above. It's a new type flexible steel cord support, with its own built-in extension cord. It plugs into the wall outlet, then the ironing cord plugs into it. While you're tending to your ironing, it tends to the cord and keeps it out of your way



YOU don't even have to cut the orange to use this juicer. Just pop in the whole orange and the device cuts and squeezes it in one quick operation when the handle is pressed down. Special perforations strain the juice swiftly into the glass. Handsomely finished in gleaming chrome and enamel, this juicer makes the orange squeezing job quicker and neater

Do's, Don'ts on Venetian Blinds

The following do's and don'ts for venetian blinds are recommended by the Venetian Blind Association of America.

The association recommends that you treat your blinds as you do your furniture. Dust them as often as you dust your home. A five-minute session with an ostrich feather duster will keep them good as new all year through. Dust away from the tapes.

Once a month or so wipe the blinds down with one of the standard cleaners such as glycerine or ammonia or good old soap 'n water. If you're gagdet-minded, there are several blind cleaning devices on the market . . . though regular dusting and the standard cleaners will keep your venetian blinds bright.

If you want your blinds refinished, repaired, or given a good facelifting check with the firm from whom you originally ordered the blinds.

And here are the don'ts:

NEVER use wax on wood blinds! no matter how sparingly you use it, the wax makes repainting and refinishing of blinds impossible. Paint will not adhere to a waxed surface.

NEVER douse your blinds in a bathtub! Tapes may shrink or fade and carelessly undried water spots may mar the beauty of your blinds, be they wood or otherwise. After all, you don't dunk your other furniture in the bathtub . . . and the blinds are furniture.

NEVER expose your blinds to rain, hail, sleet and snow. The staging element can ruin the paint finish unless you are certain to wipe them dry as soon as possible.

NEVER allow your blinds to become so dusty or soot covered that an ammonia cleaning will not restore their natural beauty. Like any other furniture, the more care you give your blinds, the more years they will live.

Corduroys Come In Vivid Colors

Plaid corduroys come in pretty new color combinations this year—violet and purple, wheat gold and turkey red, arcady blue and black, rose and black. Quilted corduroy offers something new and different from the usual square pattern, for it is done in a swirling motif. This artistic quilting gives corduroy a richer mixture.

May of today's corduroys are vat dyed, sanforized and water-repellent. Too, they are made in a wide variety of weights: featherweight for dresses and so pliable they are like any other light-weight fabric, and heavier for suits and coats.

Too Salty

If ham or tongue seems particularly salty, change the water when it is half cooked and start boiling again with the fresh water. This will eliminate a great deal of the salty taste.

Poor Flooring

If the boards of your floor do not fit well, never put your rugs directly next to them. If you cannot afford the regular pads that come for this purpose put a thick layer of newspapers under the rugs so they do not come in contact with the floor boards.

Following Spring Cleaning

Just about now, the mop looks as though it had taken a beating, yet it's an unpleasant thing to wash and we rather dread the job. Try boiling it in an old pail half full of water to which 1 tablespoon of lye has been added.

Rust on Metal

Rust spots on metal should be sandpapered off before any coat of paint is applied to the metal. If not the rust will continue it's devasting work and soon appear through the new coat of paint.

Lighter and Better

Bamboo rakes are much better for the lawn than the old ones made of iron. The rake is lighter and the finer prongs will remove the leaves and grass without injuring the new growth.

Washing Woodwork

When washing painted woodwork, wash just a small space at a time, rinse thoroughly and wipe dry with a clean cloth. This will prevent any streaks on the wood after cleaning.

Ask Anne: About Spraying Army Foot Locker

Where can I have an Army footlocker sprayed white? Is there a place in Arlington?
L. M.

Look under "Painters" in the yellow section of the telephone book and you will find the names of several Arlington paint shops where you can get the locker sprayed. It would be a good idea to telephone before taking the trunk to the shop.

I would like information about a September 22 wedding.

1. What kind of material should my matron of honor's and bridesmaid's dresses be made of?

While velvet is often worn at fall and winter weddings, I'm afraid that in late September in West Virginia you might have weather so warm as to make velvet uncomfortable. Moire, faille, taffeta, or even satin would be appropriate. Fall colors in rich tones could be used—gold, rose, wood's green, bronze, silver blue, wine—there are lots of them. The bridesmaids could all be dressed alike in one color, with the matron of honor wearing a gown of contrasting shade.

2. What type and color dresses should the mothers wear?

The answer to this question depends on the time of day of the wedding. If yours is to be a formal or semiformal morning wedding, street-length costumes with hats and gloves are in order for the mothers. For an afternoon wedding, floor-length gowns of the dinner type, with long or short sleeves, are correct. Dinner type hats to match the gowns may be worn. For a formal wedding the mothers may be more dressy, wearing evening gowns with boleros or jackets and hats if required in your church. Later, at the reception, they can remove jackets and hats. As to color, choose a soft, flattering shade in a color becoming to the individual. Be sure, though, that these dresses do not clash with each other or those of your attendants.

(3) What should the father, best man and ushers wear? What color suit and tie? D.B.

This also depends on the time of day. Cutaway coats and striped trousers are the correct daytime dress for a very formal wedding; tail coats and full dress are what's worn in the evening. However, for the semiformal wedding (where the bride wears a short wedding veil and no train), the men can wear their own black or oxford gray business coats (as substitutes for cutaways) and striped trousers. At an evening semiformal wedding the men wear dinner jackets or tuxedos. Black ties are worn with all these costumes except full dress, which requires a white tie.

Since you're anxious to have as much helpful information as possible and our space is limited here, I'd suggest that you get some such book as "Your Wedding," by Marjorie Binford Woods (Bobbs Merrill) at a bookshop or library. Or you may obtain a helpful pamphlet entitled "How to Plan Your Wedding" by sending 25 cents in coin to The Washington Post Reader Service, 243 West 17th st., New York 11, N. Y. Ask for booklet No. 204.

So often that tired feeling is not so much actual physical tire as a poorly balanced diet with far too many sweets and starches which are pouring acid into the system and causing the effect of tiredness. Watch your diet.

Partial Parent Harms Child With Favors

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Parents deny, vehemently, the they are partial to one or another of their children. What they do not recognize is what determines partiality. It isn't just being nicer and sweeter to one child. It is more apt to be just natural conduct which comes about because inevitably children are of different ages.

Mothers always take up the cudgels for the baby, protect his belongings, see that he isn't mistreated. A slightly older child may not be conscious that this is done because the baby has to have a champion, the child is apt to think that it is because the mother likes the baby best.

The baby, in turn, sees only the privileges which accrue to the older members of the family and feels that he alone is deprived of them. He can't eat the same food or drink the same soft drinks. He has to stay behind his play pen fence while the other children cavort in the yard. As the child grows, the injustices he feels he suffers are ever increasing. He comes to believe that because he is younger he is eternally the underdog of the family.

Children, both old and young, are poor estimators of the parents' affection. A child sees one member of the family being praised for watering the plants and when he does the same and the pots overflow, he is resentful because he was scolded.

Children are ever conscious of the blame they receive, the scoldings, the warnings, the explanations. They do not balance these with the praise they get. In fact, it may be all out of balance and the child knows it. He thinks the other fellow always has the best of it, he gets all the blame, the others all the praise.

Real partiality the just parent will never admit. But she has to work hard not to express it some way. For one child may be more compatible than another. One child may resemble in looks or actions the mother's own family; another may be the replica of some disliked relative on the father's side.

It takes a big person, and a person who understands the roots of favoritism, to give each child impartial treatment. Yet each child to be a wholesome personality must receive the same praise, the same love and attention as every other child in the family.

The Perambulator

Do not overlook a general overhauling of baby's carriage during the cleaning. Remove the cushions and wash the coach inside and out. Vacuum the cushions and go over with cleaning fluid before returning. Oil the various working parts and clean all fittings. You will find it a much better setting for baby when you are finished.

Vacation Routine

Valentina Has Answer To Packing

Valentina, the famous dress designer, has given a new twist to the lots-in-little vacation packing routine. Always an advocate of the few-unit wardrobe designed to intermingle in magic combinations, Valentina went to Europe recently with enough clothes (even for her, one of the world's best dressed) to last through two months and four countries, England, France, Switzerland and Italy—and all in four suitcases and a duffel bag.

The trick, explained Valentina, lies in understanding the climate and the conditions of the countries you visit and then in packing each suitcase with just the right clothes for a certain climate and the things you do there. In each country you open one suitcase only, and never bother with the rest. For instance, Valentina has a suitcase marked with a big I filled with clothes for shipboard, an old tweed suit, a wool dress, sweaters and a couple of dinner dresses and an evening skirt with two evening blouses. This suitcase will be locked after leaving the ship and stored in her Paris hotel until she sails home again.

For France and Italy, one large suitcase marked II does the work. In it are packed a wonderful raw silk suit in natural with deep grey woven stripes, its jacket simple and straight with big patch pockets and a small round collar, its skirt slim with trouser pleats. A fine black jersey blouse and two colored crepe blouses vary this suit's possibilities as they do a suit of fine navy wool with a short jacket and medium full gathered skirt. A marvelous two-piece dress of jacquard weave, black and white polka dot dull surah silk has a softly draped top with neckline gathered to a shoestring tie and full gathered sleeves with narrow band cuffs. The skirt is full and gathered with a wide cummerbund top which this designer made famous. The skirt can be worn with black, white or colored blouses made the same way in handkerchief linen or silk, all divinely washable.

Valentina points out to travelers that Europe is a land of expert laundresses but not of dry cleaners. Therefore everything she has in a light color is washable. There are two marvelous dresses of fine Italian muslin dyed palest pink and soft pale blue. One is a two-piece with the surplice long-sleeved top and sashed skirt, the other, one-piece with a narrow tie belt. Both have pleated skirts and both, says Valentina, can be washed and exquisitely ironed overnight in any good European hotel.

A patterened silk damask suit, a short black crepe dress which is simple enough for afternoon and adaptable enough to look gala with jewels and a little brief scarf, a dreamy short dress of pale beige crepe with bouquets of finely drawn flowers in black, and a floating evening dress of layers of beige organza over shell pink taffeta complete the packing.

Classic Suits Included

For England and Switzerland, Valentina's suitcase No. 3 contains two of her inimitable "classic" suits, soft and casual, one collarless the other with a little round collar, one in two shades of gray flannel, the other dark green. Tailored shirts and soft-colored silk and linen blouses combine with both and can be worn without the jacket on warm days. Two dark crepe dresses, a black dinner dress and a wonderful crimson-and-black damask dinner skirt with matching blouse and black blouse complete this wardrobe unit.

The piece of luggage marked No. 4 does duty throughout the trip. It is a large hat box with three shallow cone-shaped coolie hats of the type Valentina made famous, and three of her little soft pillbox toques in wool crepe and velvet to be worn with jewels. All fit together like cookies in a tin. The other side of the case carries its load of lingerie, stockings, scarves and shoes. The duffel bag holds all oddments, parcels and books. Altogether the contents of the four add up to much less than the average woman takes to Europe and never, never does Valentina have to scramble through one bag after another trying to find the right thing to wear.

One last warning from this expert: loose belts, clothes with fancy buttons and junk jewelry are the bane of a traveler's existence. Include them out of your travel wardrobe.

Sun Glasses Now Fashion Accessories

By Betty Clarke

Sun glasses have hit the jackpot this year. The smart styles now available will make it a difficult choice for fashion-wise ladies. The many unusual features and the smart array of colors make sun glasses high-style accessories.

You can have frames made to match your favorite costume by having a bit of the material processed into the plastic frames. There are frames of every color, some with jewels, others with ornate decoration.

Some new glasses contain mirror lenses which are metallic coated, precision ground opthalmic lenses. This thin chromium deposit on the glass is said to be the most effective heat dissipating agent known, a reflecting mirror. Not only can your best beau see himself in your glasses, but tests show that less infra-red heat rays penetrate the glass.

The color can be altered artificially. A wholly green fruit may be fully ripe under certain natural conditions. Under other conditions a fully yellowed orange may be immature. Not its color but its composition determines whether or not it is ripe. When the orange is picked, it is as ripe as it ever will be.

Copper plumbing, oil heat, attached garage, really neat.
Located out near the city line, buses and schools are really fine.

Those Reds Really Break It Up

NEW YORK. — Recently the Riviera newspapers reported the collapse of the owner of the Blue Pavillion, a cafe in Cannes. These are the unpublished details: The cafe was financed by a Czarist, a familiar figure at El Morocco and related to the Grand Duke Boris. He was told by the restaurateur: "The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are dining here tomorrow. I would like the room to be full of gay people." The Czarist immediately announced that he was giving a gay farewell party for Felix Ferry, the Hollywood agent, and invited 35 gay friends. The party was too gay, because after enough vodka had been served, the Russians started their glass-breaking ritual. Then they broke plates, chairs, tables. The alarmed Windsors fled, and the restaurateur suffered a stroke.

Senator Glen Taylor, the Vice Presidential candidate, is arranging to have his brother, Paul, a locomotive engineer from San Jose, Calif., run for Congress on the third party ticket.

Beatrice Lillie, who has sold all the landscapes she's painted, has turned to painting portraits. . . . Leo Durocher listened to a ballpark expert criticizing the New York Giants' dressing rooms because they're outmoded and are across the field from the dugouts. "You're right, but nobody'll catch me squawking about it," said Durocher, "because they'd tell me 'If it was good enough for John McGraw . . . ' " All the money Norman Thomas received for covering the political conventions for the Denver Post and 14 other newspapers went into his Presidential campaign fund.

The venerable Fanny Ward, who has made a career out of being Old, tells this story: When she was in Egypt she took a drive into the desert and stopped in front of the Sphinx. "Oh, Sphinx, you relic of many centuries, speak to me." She heard only silence . . . "Oh, Sphinx," Miss Ward continued, "you symbol of the ageless past, speak to me." Again there was silence . . . "Oh, Sphinx," she said, "monument of ancient glories, survivor of thousands of generations now crumpled to dust, speak to me—this is Fanny Ward" . . . The Sphinx opened its eyes, and replied, "Mother."

A plane carrying Senator Brewster of Maine came down at the Grossinger Airport in Liberty, N. Y. The Republican Senator was made welcome and was put up for the night in Grossinger's new Roosevelt House . . .

Last week, 17 years after his death, the annual posthumous birthday party was given in N. Y. for David Belasco, by his secretary. Belasco and his son-in-law, Morris Gest, are buried in the family mausoleum in Cypress Hills. One outsider lies buried there—the moon-faced Nikita Balieff, the funny little Russian who starred in Gest's "Chauve Souris." Belasco and Gest had an argument and didn't speak to each other. But when Belasco died, penniless, it was Gest who saved him from Potters Field. He buried Balieff in the Belasco tomb, and shrugged: "He always did make Belasco laugh."

Belasco and Gest were spiritualist. After Belasco died, Hannen Swaffer, the London columnist who also is a spiritualist, told Gest: "I'm in frequent touch with Mr. Belasco. He now is doing greater productions than he ever did in his span on earth" . . . "Is he happy?" Gest asked . . . "His only complaint," said Swaffer, "is about the show-lighting. There are no shadows in Heaven, so he can't get the light and shade effects he always stressed. That's the only thing bothering him" . . . Louis Hartman was Belasco's lighting expert for 40 years, starting with "The Return of Peter Grimm." And when Hartman died, Gest cabled Swaffer: "Mr. Belasco's happiness should be complete now."

In the New York Law Journal appeared a notice from Francis R. Stark, asking that his friends please omit flowers. The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Baby Assistants

Most parents recognize that some jealousy is to be expected when a new baby comes into the family. Even when there has been intelligent preparation of the children for the arrival, it may be difficult for them to keep from feeling left out.

There is no simple, easy answer. One approach has proved its value over and over again, however. Without forcing too many duties on older children, they may be permitted and encouraged to take a responsible role in the care of the newcomer. If the baby is bottle-fed, even a 4 or 5-year-old can sometimes hold the bottle. Mother may let older brothers and sisters hold the baby, too, even though some unobtrusive assistance has to be provided. Diaper-changing is another possibility.

It was discovered during the war that among the people who were being bombed, it was those who had jobs to do—putting out incendiaries, giving first aid—who were less upset emotionally. Perhaps the same thing is operating in this less dramatic situation. Children who are helping are less likely to feel the pangs of jealousy and neglect.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Martin Again Blocks Housing Bill

By Drew Pearson

Speaker Joe Martin has again blocked the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing act by a clever parliamentary maneuver. The bill has been passed by the Senate, has been O.K.'d by the House Banking and Currency Committee, but is now blocked inside the Rules Committee. It could be passed in about one day if the Rules Committee would let it reach the House floor for debate.

REP. MARTIN

In order to get it to the floor, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas of California has been circulating a "discharge" petition, which when it gets 215 names will force the Rules Committee to discharge the housing bill.

But to block Mrs. Douglas, Speaker Martin decreed that no Congressman could sign the petition unless the House was in session. Then Joe promptly recessed the Houe for a long weekend.

This probably makes the passage of a housing act impossible. Because it is required that Mrs. Douglas' discharge petition "lie on the Speaker's desk for seven legislative days," by which time the special session of Congress will have adjourned—if GOP leaders have their way.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Douglas has 163 names on her petition. Sam Rayburn has promised to get her the last 25 names as soon as she gets 190.

Unfortunate Congressman

But when a Congressman is so frequently under the influence of liquor that he literally has to be escorted away from public functions where he is scheduled to speak, and when he attempts to transfer an enlisted man to an active war front because of personal spite, then the people who elect him are entitled to know about it. It is the unpleasant obligation of the Washington press to report these things.

In 1945, Roy H. Hamilton of Berea, Ky., a Navy enlisted man with 32 months duty overseas, was ordered back to the United States after VE-Day. But Hamilton had certain political information about Congressman Chapman, who fenagled with the Navy to order Hamilton back to sea. At this point, Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky intervened with the Secretary of the Navy, told him of Chapman's personal spite, and the order was canceled.

Equally embarrassing have been some of the Congressman's antics an official trips and speaking engagements. Sent to Alaska at the taxpayers' expense on an official inspection trip, the Gentleman from Kentucky fell so lamentably below Kentucky standards when it came to holding his liquor that he had to be taken to a hospital. At one time, Representative Leonard Hall, New York Republican, had to escort Chapman out of a hotel bar to keep him from embarrassing the official mission.

On another occasion, Chapman got in such a condition while attending a meeting of the House Secretaries Association that other guests pushed him outside the door, where he lay in the hall—the fallen Gentleman from Kentucky. Again, scheduled to speak at the Thoroughbred Horse Racing Association last year, Chapman got himself in such a state that the toastmaster could not call on him.

This is the man who now aspires to the United States Senate. When a United States Ambassador makes a public spectacle of himself, he is recalled. A Congressman is the ambassador of his own district. However, he cannot be recalled except by the people who elect him. Unpleasant as the above facts are, it is better that the people of Kentucky know them before an election, not afterward.

Friendship Exhibit

The Library of Congress this week has a special display of gifts from the people of France and Italy in gratitude for the Friendship Train. It includes a special resolution of thanks passed by the French Assembly and signed by M. Edouard Herriot, the Grand Old Man of France.

A special resolution from the cities of Italy, bearing the flags of those cities, is also in the exhibit. After the display, these documents will become the permanent records of the Library of Congress, as custodian for the American public.

Under the Dome

The House Un-American Activities Committee is secretly investigating Communism among American Negroes. Several prominent Negro leaders will be invited to testify . . . Gov. Earl Warren will open his Vice Presidential campaign September 7, with a tour of the Northwest, then will concentrate on Texas and the border States . . . Friends say Henry Wallace is privately worried over the way the commies have taken over his new party. Though worried, Wallace hasn't got the courage to kick them out . . . Congratulations to the Senate Small Business Committee for helping the small oil companies from being crowded out by the big boys . . . Senator Ecton of Montana and Congressman John Sanborn of Idaho, both Republicans, are using their free mailing frank to blanket the West with silver lobby propaganda . . . Republicans are debating whether to call a special session of their own—right after the November election. The idea has the approval of House Speaker Joe Martin.
